Textile Plants Under Code to Increase Pay

Roosevelt Issues Order Affecting 600,000 Mill Workers.

Decision Is Deferred on General Demand to Boost Wages.

(Associated Press.)

By executive order, President Roosevelt last night authorized textile mills of all sorts to come in under the wage-raising, hour-limiting provisions of the cotton industry's code which takes effect today signifying immediate pay raises for hundreds of thousands of workers.

After a day-long conference with Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, aboard the yacht Sequoia, the President postponed decision on the plan for calling on all industry to join in the national recovery movement by raising wages and limiting working hours, so as to make more jobs without waiting for action on their codes of fair competition—the means offered by the industrial control law to achieve this purpose.

More Pay for 600,000.

The President's order made binding upon rayon weaving plants, silk mills, cotton thread and "throwing" or thread-weaving factories the 40-hour work week and the $12 and $13 minimum wage level, with corresponding increases for higher paid employes, prescribed in the agreement signed by the cotton men. It was roughly estimated that this meant more pay for 600,000 to 700,000 men.

In separate orders, the President ruled that though the cotton code goes into full force today, the date promulgated, firms which did not sign it may immediately seek a hearing if they regard its terms as unjust to them. To give them time, they were made exempt for ten days from the penalties prescribed by law for noncompliance with the code's terms.

Effective Indefinitely.

At the same time, at the request of the industry, Mr. Roosevelt made the cotton code effective indefinitely instead of for four months only, and he accepted the suggestion that his demand for proportionate raises to all workers now earning above the minimum wage level be left to a steering committee of the cotton men to work out.

The President's action on the application of rayon, silk and other related lines, together with the raises put into effect by steel plants and others filing wage-boostings agreements with Johnson, brings more pay today for nearly 1,000,000 men and women.

Although no action was taken on the "blanket" code proposal by which every line of business would be asked to join voluntarily, there may be some public appeal for it later. It has been established definitely that the industrial control law does not permit any order being issued without individual hearings to effect wholesale raises.

National Drive Planned.

In the making, however, is a Nation-wide organization of committees and speakers to carry the cause of the recovery program into every community, drumming up popular sentiment. Ahead of this campaign, still somewhat indefinite, every effort is being made by Johnson's organization to bring in vouuntary agreements from every major line of business and industry.

If the latter does not complete the job and bring an avalanche of increased wages and new jobs from end to end of the country, the President may resort to a public call for cooperation simultaneously with the regionalized campaign.

Among the orders approved yesterday by the President, seven in all, was one confirming the authority of Johnson as administrator on a permanent basis.

Wage Provision Changed.

One of the changes made in the President's conditions to acceptance of the code was to rewrite the clause on higher wage levels so that it now provides that no worker in the upper brackets shall get less pay for 40 hours than he used to get for the longer work week.

That now is coupled with requirement that the higher wages

Likes Cherries

President Ate Too Many for Weight's Good on Cruise.

(Associated Press.)

The campaign of President Roosevelt for a reduction of seven pounds went by the boards on his week-end cruise and the Chief Executive conceded last night that maybe he ate too many cherries.

Appearing happy and well rested as he returned to the White House, he was asked about the "news."

"Nothing particular," he responded, "except maybe I ate too many cherries."

Kidnap Gang Frees Banker After Five Days

Financier, 77, Held Captive in Illinois Dungeon by Abductors.

Alton, Ill., July 16 (U.P.).—August Luer, 77-year-old millionaire banker and packer, rested tonight in the country home of his son, Herman, after his release from kidnapers who held him for five days and four hours in an underground prison.

Despite the fact that he has suffered for years from a heart ailment, that he collapsed in a ditch after his release and was fed no warm foods during his imprisonment, Luer appeared in fairly good condition and plans were made to take him to his own home tomorrow.

"I lived through it because I knew I had to," the kindly banker explained as posses hunted along the Mississippi River for clews which might lead to capture of the kidnapers.

There were no denials that ransom was paid for the banker's freedom, but opinions differed as to the amount. A person who is so close to the Luer family that his statements could not be questioned said he knew that the amount paid was "either $50,000 or $100,000."

Gang Led by Woman.

After holding the elderly victim prisoner in a dark, damp, underground prison, believed probably to have been a coal mine shaft, the kidnapers, led by a woman, released Luer shortly after 12 o'clock this morning, near Carlinsville.

Luer's first act after being put out of the kidnaper's automobile on a lonely road was to tear from his eyes the tape that had blinded him since his abduction.

Then he started walking, stumbling from fatigue, until he fell into a ditch at the roadside. There he lay for several minutes.

"I knew I had to go on, so I did," he explained with the same finality he had expressed in telling why he lived through an experience that neither relatives nor physicians had thought he could possibly survive.

Arousing himself from the stupor of exhaustion, Luer stumbled along the roadway, not knowing where he was going, until he reached the roadhouse of Mrs. Grace Mattox and telephoned his son, Carl, whose Alton home is just across the street from that of his parents.

"The wire must have been tapped," an authoritative source said later "for although the call was to Carl, officers reached Luer before his relatives did."

Sheriff Peter Fitzgerald and Chief of Police James Hart found Luer at the roadhouse and took him to Herman Luer's home, which is in a wooded area, removed from traffic, and surrounded by a high, iron fence.

The victim's wife, 75 years old, rushed to him with her sons.

Physicians Amazed.

The elder Luer retired soon after reaching the home and slept most of today. Physicians were amazed at his condition.

Luer, when found, was covered with coal soot, leading to the belief he had been held in a mine. He said his prison was under ground, that it was damp and that the food

Son of Roosevelt To Call on Lebrun

Paris, July 16 (A.P.).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., son of the American President, who arrived last week on a vacation trip from America, said today—reversing the usual experience of tourists—that he found his visit to Paris affording him an opportunity to catch up on sleep.

He described his stay in Paris, where he passes unnoticed, "as very vacationish."

He has nearly finished his sightseeing and expects to call upon President Lebrun tomorrow. He will go to London within a few days.

2 Gangsters Arrested in Factor Case

Ex-Convicts Are Seized at Former Stronghold of Capone.

Suspects Also Linked to Abduction of Business Man.

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—Martin O'Leary and Carl Fontana, former convicts, were arrested today in connection with the kidnaping of John Factor, speculator, who was held captive twelve days and freed last week after payment of $50,000 ransom.

The pair was seized at a Cicero hotel, former Capone stronghold.

They were to be questioned by Capt. Dan Gilbert, head of the kidnap detail of the State's attorney's office, and Melvin Purvis, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Factor also was summoned from his luxurious Pearson Hotel apartment to look the prisoners over. He claimed previously, however, that he would be unable to identify any of his abductors.

Sought for Year.

O'Leary and Fontana, police revealed, have been sought for more than a year for the kidnaping of David Blumenthal, Chicago business man. Police also announced they are seeking other members of the O'Leary-Fontana combination, including "Dago" Lawrence Mangano, Ernest Rossi, Charles (Buster) Brown, of St. Louis, and Verne Sankey.

The latter was held responsible by police for the recent kidnaping of William Hamm, jr., St. Paul brewer, and Charles Boettcher 2d, Denver broker.

Meantime a cooperative organization of Midwest Federal, State and city law enforcing officers was being formed here to combat the kidnaping "racket," which has taken a toll of several million dollars annually in the district.

Cummings Takes Step.

Attorney General Cummings in Washington ordered Purvis to cooperate with officials designated by Gov. Henry Horner, of Illinois, Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, of Cook County, Ill., to stamp out the extortionists.

A cooperative kidnap detail organized last night was concentrated in northwest side suburbs, preparatory to "mopping up" as one official phrased it, the Roger Tuohy gang, blamed for the Factor kidnaping.

The detail had instructions to pick up Harvey Bailey, who led the recent sensational jail break at Lansing, Kans., and Tommy O'Conner, Chicago killer, who escaped from jail here in 1921, four days before he was to have been hanged.

Both are reported to be operating under the cloistering cloak of the Tuohy gang.

O'Connell Hunt Goes On.

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—Two West Side warehouses were searched from top to bottom late today by police looking for the kidnaped son of John J. O'Connell, Albany political leader.

Receiving an anonymous tip that the 24-year-old youth might be found in a West Fifty-fourth street warehouse, police searched the building thoroughly without finding any trace of young O'Connell or his kidnapers.

Moving downtown, the searchers then went through a six-story warehouse in West Twenty-seventh street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, with similar results.

Rancher Guarded After Kidnap Error

California Search Started for Plotters Who Seized Aid, 70.

Stockton, Calif., July 16 (A.P.).—Object of a mistaken identity kidnap plot, W. Q. Wright, wealthy ranch owner, was given a police guard here today.

The plot was revealed after E. T. Wiggins, 70, superintendent of Wright's Land Co., was released by kidnapers in northern California yesterday.

Wiggins was kidnaped in the belief he was Wright, police said. A note received at the land company's office demanded $50,000 for the release of "W. Q. Wright." A Statewide search was started for the kidnapers.

Fascists Invite Balbo To Visit Panama City

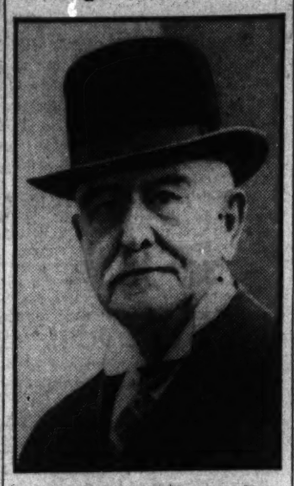
Murray Bay, Quebec, July 16 (A.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, on a vacation tour in Canada, called on Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the former President of the United States, during the week-end. She spent some time chatting with Mrs. Taft before continuing her motor trip eastward.

Long Career Ends.



William L. Ward, veteran New York Republican leader, who died last night.

W. L. Ward Dies; Long New York G. O. P. Leader

Former National Figure Spurned Invitation to White House.

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—William L. Ward, veteran Republican leader of Westchester County, died at a hospital tonight.

Ward, long a dominant figure in State politics, underwent an operation recently and had been gravely ill for several days. He died shortly before 6 p. m. (Eastern standard time) in Mount Sinai Hospital.

Members of his family and friends were at his bedside when the 76-year-old political leader died.

Ward, for 37 years chairman of the Westchester County Republican committee, submitted to the operation on June 23.

Had Old Oak Desk.

He was born in Greenwich, Conn., on September 2, 1856, the only son of the late William E. Ward and Tacy Lukens Ward.

A multimillionaire, he lived alone in his later years in a mansion called The Castle, atop a hill in Port Chester.

He carried on his political affairs at an old oak desk in White Plains—a desk on which there was nothing but a bottle of mineral water and a scratch pad.

Thirty years ago a prominent figure in national politics, serving on the powerful Executive committee of the Republican National committee, Ward in his later years was reduced to his leadership of Westchester County.

Always Independent.

Always personally independent Ward once flatly refused President Taft's invitation to dine with him and other national committeemen at the White House. Instead he played rummy in a Washington hotel, explaining he never attended dinners. And he didn't for many years.

Ward was married to the late Madge Leland, daughter of the late Warren Leland, of Long Branch, N. J., on September 15, 1880. They had four children, two sons and two daughters, who survive. Mrs. Ward died twenty years ago.

The U. S. Weather Bureau announced yesterday a tropical disturbance of moderate intensity was centered east of Jamaica and was moving northwestward at 16 miles an hour.

Delegates Revolt Against Feeding

London, July 16 (U.P.).—The hotel where the American delegates to the World Economic Conference are staying is world-famous for its cuisine.

The Americans are accommodated there for $6 a day, much less than the regular rates, because that is the limit of their allowance from Washington.

The hotel has had to cut down a little on the facilities allowed the Americans. Some of the United States delegates claim the menu has offered little choice except chicken or lamb chops.

Two delegates, Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, and Edward Bruce of Maryland, revolted today, ordered a huge steak sent to their room and dined ravenously, claiming it was the first meal they had enjoyed since coming to London.

Post Hops Off for Siberia After Day Lost in Germany; Lithuanian Plane Overdue

Darius and Girenas Are Anxiously Awaited by Kovno Crowd.

Aircraft Sighted Over Pomerania Bolsters Hope for Pair.

Kovno, Lithuania (Monday), July 17 (U.P.).—Eager throngs awaiting arrival of Stephen Darius and Stanley Girenas, Lithuanian-American fliers due from the United States, became restless early today as hours passed beyond the time of their expected landing.

Enthusiasm of Lithuanians for the first attempt to link the United States and this tiny Baltic Sea nation in a flight had been stirred to a high pitch when a plane believed to have been the Lithuania-bound Bellanca was reported sighted over Pomerania late last night.

Aviation officials here announced, on the basis of that report, which they released officially, that the aviators would land here at 3 a. m. (8 p. m. Sunday, Eastern standard time).

50 Hours Fuel Supply.

Officials were hopeful, however, that the fliers would arrive safely, pointing out that Darius and Girenas were reported in New York dispatches to have carried more than 700 gallons of gasoline, enough to keep them in the air at least 50 hours.

It was considered possible that the plane reported over Staggard, Pomerania, was not the Lithuanian craft and that they still might land here before their fuel was exhausted.

If the Bellanca's fuel lasted 50 hours, the fliers could remain aloft until after 2 p. m. (7 a. m., Eastern standard time.)

There were conflicting reports regarding the plane over Pomerania. The dispatch announced by officials that the airdrome here said the plane was sighted and spoke of it definitely as that of the Lithuanian-Americans.

Plane's Motor Heard.

A United Press dispatch from Berlin subsequently quoted air officials at Stettin, Pomerania, as saying that the motor of a plane had been heard, but that it was not sighted due to the overcast sky. Stettin officials were said to have assumed that the plane was the one sought because no German ship was due there at that time.

Darius and Girenas were last definitely reported when they left the North American Continent at Notre Dame Bay, Newfoundland, at 2:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, Saturday.

The disappointed crowd at the airfield began to disperse at 4:50 a. m.

Aviation authorities refused to believe Darius and Girenas had met with disaster. They said there was a possibility the airmen had landed in some remote place. They made every endeavor to check possible landing places.

Should Darius and Girenas come down in any country except Lithuania they would be liable to arrest, since they left New York before arranging permission to fly over any country.

1 Killed, 3 Injured In Crash on Road

English, Ind., July 16 (A.P.).—A girl was killed and three other young people injured when their automobile crashed head-on into a concrete bridge abutment at a curve on the State road between Jasper and French Lick early today.

Miss Mary Katherine Barksdale, 18, of Paoli, died instantly. Loren Jenner, 18, of Marengo, driver of the automobile; Miss Mary Louise Braxton, 18, and Russell Ralston, 18, both the latter from Paoli, were taken to St. Edward's Hospital, at New Albany.

Two Records Set By Post's Flight

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—Wiley Post's solo flight to Berlin in 25 hours 45 minutes set two records.

It was the first nonstop flight between New York and the German capital.

And it was the fastest flight between the two cities.

In addition, it was the first solo transatlantic flight to end at its announced destination since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew to Paris.

3 Persons Die As Plane Falls Near Grottoes

Victims Are Pinned Under Craft Crashing in Woods After Tail Spin.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 16 (A.P.).—Three persons were killed in an airplane crash in a patch of woods in East Rockingham, near Grottoes, late this afternoon.

The dead are: George Olinger, 20, of New Market, Va., pilot and owner of the plane. Harry Strickler, 23, of New Market, Va., William Eaton, 22, of Grottoes, Va.

The plane went into a tailspin at a height of 1,000 feet and crashed into the woods. The wreckage did not catch fire. The motor stopped a moment before the spin, witnesses said.

The plane, a two-seated cabin model, struck a tree 60 feet high and one wing was ripped off. Then it plunged to the ground 50 feet away, striking another tree as it landed.

All three occupants were pinned under the machine. Their skulls were crushed and they were otherwise injured. The plane was a total wreck.

Olinger had been hauling passengers from an improvised field at Grottoes for several Sundays. It is understood here he had been a licensed pilot for about two years.

Steamer Off Norfolk Fights Fire in Hold

New York, July 17 (A.P.).—The crew of the steamship El Occidente was fighting a fire in her No. 1 hold off Norfolk, Va., a message picked up by Mackay Radio Corporation early today said.

The message said the fire had been "localized," that the vessel was not in need of any assistance, and that she expected to anchor off Norfolk until morning.

Montevideo, Uruguay, July 16 (A.P.).—Gen. Domingo Mendivil, minister of war, resigned today, and the government offered the portfolio to Col. Jose M. Gomeza.

Gen. Mendivil was appointed minister of war on April 5 in the new cabinet of Dr. Gabriel Terra, who had assumed dictatorial powers.

Oklahoman Sets Record on Speedy Flight to Berlin.

Very Tired, He Enjoys Sleep After Being Forced Back.

Koenigsberg, Germany (Monday), July 17 (A.P.).—Wiley Post, American world flier, hopped away at 6:45 a. m. today (12:45, E. S. T.), after being grounded here more than a day because of poor weather.

His departure for Novosibirsk, Siberia, was made after he received weather reports from along the route. They apparently were favorable.

Koenigsberg, Germany (Monday), July 17 (A.P.).—Wiley Post, American globe flier, suffered a second delay due to stormy weather early today after he had made a transoceanic flight from New York to Berlin at record speed.

Post alighted at the airdrome here at 6:40 o'clock last night (12:40 p. m. Sunday, Washington time) due to poor visibility.

At dawn he arose to resume his interrupted flight to Novosibirsk, Siberia, only to find rain and overcast skies. He had gone to bed immediately upon arriving last night.

Philosophically, he again went to bed pending the arrival of weather reports from Moscow.

Flying Weather "Bad."

An airport official described flying weather as "quite bad," but said Post looked thoroughly recovered from the fatigue of his transatlantic venture and the solo flier's plane was ready to proceed.

The official denied reports that the plane's oil line had suffered damage.

Although he had flown to Berlin in the record time of 25 hours and 45 minutes from New York, delays in refueling at Berlin and the weather setback here put Post somewhat behind a schedule he had set for himself.

Pausing at Berlin only to take a shower bath and to superintend the refueling of his purple and white monoplane, the Winnie Mae, of Oklahoma, he sped eastward for Novosibirsk.

Flying sometimes as high as 11,000 feet, Post raced through bad weather over a large part of his trip. The stocky little pilot, grimy and deaf from the prolonged roar of the motor, appeared exhausted as he climbed limply from his plane at Templehof Airdrome. A band was playing the Star-Spangled Banner.

He climbed wearily from his craft, helped by a policeman, but he smiled as he tried to pull himself together in facing the welcoming officials and a group of newspapermen.

Hailed by 2,000.

Steel-helmeted Nazi troopers armed with rifles kept a crowd of 2,000 spectators back.

After the formal greeting ceremonies, Post was hurried to a hotel

Rehiring Set In New Offices For This Week

Directors to Engage Those Persons Who Were Let Out for Economy.

Rehiring by directors of newly created Government agencies of persons holding civil service ratings will begin some time this week, it was said last night by John P. Simpson, chairman of the Civil Service Reinstatement League.

According to latest estimates, the list contains the names of approximately 2,500 single persons, with civil service ratings, and about 1,500 dismissed married persons, whose husbands or wives still remain in the service and are receiving salaries of $2,000 or less.

Simpson pointed out that while the people being placed in these new positions have civil service ratings, the positions are not listed under that commission. Directors are trying to rehire those persons who have been let out through economy measures, he said.

List of Those Qualified.

A compilation of the number of jobs in the new agencies to be filled has been made, the reinstatement chief said, and the Civil Service Commission will be asked today to submit a list of qualified employes. Other requests for certifications are expected later this week.

During five days of last week 66 persons were interviewed personally by Mr. Simpson in his office, room 704, the Ouray Building at Eighth and G streets northwest. In addition to that, 300 letters from civil service rated persons were received by his office.

It was said last night that employes of a lower efficiency rating will be reabsorbed into the Federal Government much slower than they were let out. It is improbable that a large number of employes will be taken back in one group, he said.

It is thought they will be taken back on an individual basis after an examination of their Civil Service status and efficiency.

During the last week 100 persons were rehired by the Civil Service Commission, Mr. Simpson said, adding that more than that number probably will be hired this week. He gave two reasons for this prediction.

Already Given Jobs.

First, many of those rehired last week were given jobs before President Roosevelt issued his verbal order directing that dismissed employes be given first preference. Secondly, the allotment of huge sums of money for public works and relief will necessitate additional personnel in this city to administer the authorized projects.

A warning against vindictiveness and selfish considerations among dismissed or furloughed employes was issued yesterday by John Arthur Shaw, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

The basis of "one for all and all for one" should be adhered to by employes, he said.

Post Cut Space With Phone Call

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—Mrs. Wiley Post joined her flying husband in the annihilation of distance tonight. She spoke to him by transatlantic telephone, received assurances he was well and told him to "hurry home."

The flier was reached in the airport at Koenigsberg, East Prussia, after he had enjoyed a restful sleep and begun preparations to resume his flight to Novosibirsk, Siberia, the next stop on this trip around the world.

Mrs. Post, curled in an armchair of her hotel room, found little to say.

"Well, how do you feel?" she asked in her Texas drawl.

Her husband's response—"Perl," she described it—reassured her.

"Well, hurry home," she said.

Post said he would.

"Well, I'll be seein' you," and she turned the telephone over to Lee Trenholm, the aviator's representative.

Processing Tax Rates to Face New Challenge

Farm Administrators Fear Result of Advances in Wheat and Cotton.

(Associated Press.)

Farm administrators yesterday looked for an early challenge of the rates at which they set the processing tax on wheat and cotton because climbing prices have reduced the margin for taxes provided by the agricultural act.

Their programs for the two big money crops are predicated on the expectation of a large amount of revenue from the taxes to pay farmers cash to reduce their output—about $150,000,000 to wheat farmers starting August 1 and $100,000,000 to cotton growers, who will begin receiving checks for curtailing this year's production late this week.

Programs for other crops—tobacco, corn and hogs and rice—are being worked out, with the tax expected to be the keystone of each.

But if the Government reduces the rate, the revenue produced by the tax would fall below their estimates on which administrators have based their programs for making payments to farmers to induce them to cut production.

The administrators also have looked for a challenge in the courts of the principle of the processing tax levied at the first processing plant where the raw material begins its transition into a finished product—since the farm act was passed by Congress.

But the continued rise in prices has provided them now with the immediate question of their right to levy the tax rates they have already ordered.

Hit New Peak Levels.

The issue was presented forcefully last week when both cotton and wheat prices hit new peak levels. May wheat at Chicago Saturday jumped almost 6 cents to $1.23 a bushel; cotton touched 12 cents a pound during the week, its high mark since early in 1931.

Both of the tax rate formulas are based on average farm prices from May 15 to June 15 and it is since the latter date that the most sensational rises have been registered for both commodities. The wheat tax, in effect a week, is at the rate of 30 cents a bushel, while the cotton tax will be 4.2 cents a pound effective August 1. The wheat tax is expected to yield $150,000,000; the cotton levy from $115,000,000 to $120,000,000.

Three Colleges to Get $200,000 Trust Fund

Uniontown, Pa., July 16 (A.P.).—The will of Owen R. Brownfield, of Fairchance, discloses bequests totaling $200,000 to be divided equally between three colleges, the Lincoln Memorial University, at Harrogate, Tenn.; Crossmore School, Crossmore, S. C., and Beaver College, Beaver Falls, Pa.

The money will be paid semi-annually from a trust fund.

Italian Submarines To Meet Balbo's Men

St. Johns, Newfoundland, July 16 (A.P.).—Two Italian submarines, which had been on weather observation details in the North in connection with the Chicago flight of Gen. Italo Balbo's squadron of seaplanes, have returned here. They will go on to New York to meet the squadron when it arrives there, en route back home.

The steamer Biglieri and the sealer Ungava also returned from their positions along the route of the armada's flight to Cartwright, Labrador, from Reykjavik, Iceland.

room, where he was braced by a cold shower under which he stood for nearly 20 minutes.

Then the Oklahoma aviator returned to Tempelhof, where he supervised the tanking of 2,000 liters of gasoline, about 525 gallons) and a supply of motor oil. About half of the latter was placed in reserve containers.

After about an hour Post's ears had cleared from the deafness somewhat and he chatted with Col. Jacob West, United States aviation attache, who had arrived at Tempelhof early in the morning. An American flag was hoisted on the airdrome soon after the arrival of the colonel.

The Oklahoman said he had encountered nasty weather during his flight and it had required four hours more than he anticipated to reach Berlin. While declining to go into details, he said he was perfectly satisfied with the operation of the robot pilot installed in the Winnie Mae.

Falls Asleep in Plane.

During the refueling operations, Post climbed into the cabin of his ship. He fell asleep while the work was under way, since it proceeded slowly, there being no automatic pumps available. The flier was visibly nettled at the failure of the oil company which refueled the ship to supply an electric pump.

Mechanics who serviced the ship said they found both it and the flying instruments in excellent shape.

Post received charts for as far as Moscow, but he said he intended to proceed north of the Soviet Union capital.

He ran the entire length of the field in taking off, turned westward for a time and then circled back toward the east, rapidly disappearing in that direction.

Aside from four American newspaper correspondents, who arrived at the airdrome early in the morning, few persons were on hand to greet Post until a short time before his arrival. The weather was murky and cloudy and visibility was poor. A thunderstorm began shortly after Col. West arrived.

Balbo and Governor Smile as Planes Anchor After Long Hop

Masons Hear Abernethy at Open Service

Calvary Baptist Minister Outlines Secrets of the Lord.

"When we greet a man with the customary 'How are you?' we should not be taken too literally as we are not asking for a discussion of his troubles," stated the Rev. Dr. William S. Abernethy, of the Calvary Baptist Church preaching yesterday afternoon at the Temple Heights services, held outdoors under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of the Masonic Order of the District.

Dr. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain, directed the services. It was Royal Arch Day with representatives present from Joppa Chapter No. 35, Trinity Chapter No. 41, New Jerusalem Chapter No. 9, Chevy Chase Chapter No. 42, and others. A. Clifford Wilkins, grand high priest, took part. The Eastern Star was represented by Bethany Chapter No. 24, Joppa Chapter No. 27, Chevy Chase Chapter No. 39, and Goodwill Chapter No. 36 and others.

Outlines Lord's Secrets.

Dr. Abernethy drew his text from a portion of the Twenty-fifth psalm, "The Lord is Good." He outlined a number of "Secrets of the Lord for those who have capacity to understand them."

As an example of people's ability to understand and appreciate "secrets," Dr. Abernethy pointed out that he had visited the Lincoln Memorial a number of times but had never fully appreciated the beauty of the building until he went there with an artist. Then the details were explained and Dr. Abernethy said he "saw things he had not seen before and the entire monument was fully appreciated.

He likened this to the situation in religion in which certain secrets are not understood by all people.

Gain by Giving.

The first of these secrets, he stated, was the fact that "we gain by giving away." The second, he said, was the fact that "we grow taller by bending." In this regard he pointed out the advantages of humility.

A third secret was revealed as "the ability to gain strength by becoming weak." To illustrate this, Dr. Abernethy spoke of a drowning swimmer who can not be helped unless his strength is spent.

A large crowd attended the service and heard Dr. Abernethy's talk. It was the fourth service in a series of sixteen. Next Sunday Dr. Walter F. Smith, of the Park View Christian Church, will speak, and on the following Sunday Dr. Bernard Braskamp, of the Gunston Temple Memorial Church, will be heard.

Doctor Is Quizzed In Gang's Attack

Chiropractor Is Released; Fails to Reveal Any Motive for Crime.

St. Paul, Minn., July 16 (A.P.).—Dr. W. H. Hedberg, St. Paul chiropractor, was released to his attorney today after being held in the city jail for questioning by police concerning details of an attack on him and a St. Paul physician Tuesday night.

"The police investigation will be continued," said Chief of Police Thomas E. Dahill, "but I can not say what turn it will take. Questioning of Dr. Hedberg failed to produce any clew to the identity of the gang which attacked him and Dr. E. J. Engberg. We may question him again if further developments indicate it is necessary."

The alleged purpose of the attack was an attempt by the gang to force Dr. Engberg to perform a mutilating operation on the chiropractor. He refused. Both doctors later were found on a country road near here.

Lamont Lost

Commerce Building Puts Former Chief in Daze as He Brings Steel Code.

(Associated Press.)

Robert P. Lamont lost his way Saturday in the corridors of the Commerce Department Building. A lot of other people do that regularly, but Mr. Lamont, now president of the Steel Institute, was Secretary of Commerce when the huge new building was opened.

He got lost with the steel industry's code under his arm, looking for the office of Maj. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson so he could deliver it to the Industrial Administrator. One of Gen. Johnson's assistants, who had been waiting anxiously for that code for days, found Mr. Lamont wandering down the wrong corridor and, divining the purpose of the visit, steered him quickly to the right room.

Drys in South Rally to Offset Farley's Pleas

Three States Vote This Week on Repeal of Prohibition.

Memphis, Tenn., July 16 (A.P.). The battle over prohibition continued in the South today as three traditionally dry States prepared to settle bitter disputes in referendum elections this week.

Postmaster General James A. Farley left here tonight after an address to 8,000 Southerners in which he called upon Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee to "keep the covenant" with President Roosevelt by voting to repeal the eighteenth amendment.

Even as Mr. Farley spoke, prohibition leaders were engaged in rallying their forces for a mass meeting tomorrow night at the scene of the Postmaster General's address.

Two States Vote Tomorrow.

Dr. A. J. Barton, of Wilmington, N. C., has been selected by the drys to plead for retention of the prohibition amendment. Delegations from Arkansas and other nearby States are expected to hear him.

Both sides are claiming victory in Arkansas and Alabama, where elections are slated Tuesday, and in Tennessee, where the voters ballot Thursday.

Mr. Farley said reports to him indicated all three States would vote for repeal, and added that he was told at Birmingham yesterday that Alabama would vote two to one to retire the eighteenth amendment. His predictions are sharply disputed by the prohibition forces.

Gov. J. M. Futrell, of Arkansas, a visitor here Saturday, said that he was taking no part in the repeal campaign, but that "everybody I have talked to in Arkansas seems to think the State will go for repeal."

The Commercial Appeal quoted the governor as saying "Arkansas always has been dry and will remain so under her own laws even if she votes for repeal."

Tennesseeans Reminded of Pledge.

Gov. Hill McAlister of Tennessee did not mention repeal in introducing Mr. Farley, but called attention to the Tennessee delegation's support of the Democratic platform at the Chicago convention, and added that President Roosevelt "expects the Democratic party to redeem its solemn pledge."

W. H. Meredith, speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives, another visitor here Saturday, told reporters that Missouri will vote in favor of repeal "by a tremendous majority." He said the election would be held August 19.

Code Operative In Cotton Mills Today Outlined

Rayon and Silk Spinners and Weavers Expected to Accept Plan.

(Associated Press.)

Here are the new wage-boosting, hour-shortening regulations under which the country's cotton textile mills will start operating today, and to which rayon and silk spinners and weavers are expected to subscribe:

A maximum of 40 hours a week working time for any employe even though he works for two or more employers.

A minimum wage of $12 a week in the South and $13 in the North.

Limitation of machine hours to 80 hours (two shifts of 40 hours).

Prohibition of the hiring of children under 16 years of age.

Regular Reports Required.

Prohibition of increasing the number of machines a worker is required to operate under the so-called "stretch out" system.

Periodical filing of reports by members of the Cotton Textile Institute on wages, hours, production and consumption.

Payment of time and a half for overtime work by repair shop crews, engineers, electricians and watching crews who are outside the maximum hour restrictions.

Inclusion of office employes in all benefits of the code, and maintenance of the existing ratio by which wages in the higher-paid classes, up to workers receiving $30 a week, exceed wages in the lowest paid classes.

Home-Ownership Plan.

Exception of cleaners and outside workers pending submission by January 1, 1934, by the industry's planning and supervisory committee of a schedule of minimum wages and maximum hours for them.

Working out, by the same date of a plan looking to eventual employe home-ownership in "mill villages," especially in the South.

Exemption from the machine hour limit for only three weeks of plants producing yarns or fabrics for rubber tires.

Application of the minimum wage to piece-workers as well as those on time basis.

Repeal Forecast By Maj. Dalrymple

Prohibition Administrator Pledges Enforcement Until Law Void.

Memphis, Tenn., July 16 (A.P.). The Commercial Appeal quotes Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, National prohibition administrator, as saying that "in the minds of every intelligent citizen there is no question but that the eighteenth amendment will be repealed."

Dalrymple accompanied Postmaster General James A. Farley to Memphis Saturday. Farley left tonight for Chicago. The prohibition administrator took a plane to Fort Worth this afternoon. He said he is inspecting the prohibition organization in the South.

"I do not advocate modification of the Volstead act nor oppose it," the paper quotes the administrator as saying. "I and my bureau accept the laws as they are made by Congress and approved by the President.

"The solution to that question is that the Federal Government will maintain a strong, virile, healthy force as part of and under the direction of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice."

Italian Airmen Halt Gaieties To Say Prayer

Balbo's Air Armada Craft Under Heavy Guard of U. S. Forces.

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—Italy's fliers gave thanks today for their safe crossing of land and sea—6,100 miles from Orbetello to Chicago.

Festivities, crowded upon Gen. Italo Balbo, youthful Italian air minister, and his 96 companions, were interrupted with solemnity.

At Holy Name Cathedral, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Bernard Sheil, of the archdiocese, officiated at a thanksgiving mass as the 97 airmen, in spotless white dress uniforms, knelt.

Prayers were given for the safe alighting here yesterday and for the missing comrade who died in Amsterdam in the only mishap of the world's greatest mass flight. One man lost his life when one of the seaplanes of the squadron overturned there.

25,000 At Church.

At the cathedral a crowd of some 25,000 persons jostled each other to catch a glimpse of the fliers.

The fliers, refreshed by nine hours rest, plunged into another day of celebration. They were guests of President Rufus C. Dawes, of the Century of Progress Exposition, at luncheon and then made their first inspection trip to the World's Fair, concentrating on the Italian pavilion where the architecture is symbolic of their aeronautic achievement. Later, the Hall of Science and the aviation exhibits were viewed.

Tonight Former Judge John A. Sbarbaro and the Chicago reception committee extended hospitality at a huge banquet.

Planes Guarded.

Throughout last night Coast Guard cutters guarded the 24 planes.

The men were in jovial mood, first today they wrote letters home. Their commander appointed a special secretary to take charge of the mail and speed it on its way.

The sheriff's offices said the men planned to free from jail Marcel Cousineau, 20, serving a five-year sentence for breaking and entering.

He also found time for an interview in which he praised President Roosevelt for drawing upon the talent of the South in organizing the official government at Washington.

"President Roosevelt," he said, "did not take the attitude that, since the South is safe for the Democratic party, Southern Democrats need be given no further consideration."

Farley Warns Investors on Market "Tips"

Threatens Fraud Orders in Event of Violation of New Law.

(Associated Press.)

Warning investors against the use of stock market "tipster sheets," Postmaster General Farley said yesterday, they are encouragement to speculation and a handicap to industrial recovery.

He explained in a statement that the Postoffice Department can not prevent persons from selling market advice unless fraud is employed, but added:

"I shall not hesitate, however, to issue fraud orders against every individual, bureau, corporation or association engaged in any practice which under the law is fraudulent.

"Instructions have been given to the chief inspector to investigate and make full report to me with respect to all such frauds."

Farley said the recent rise in the stock exchange "has resulted in the reappearance of the so-called 'tipster sheet' and the revival of 'market services' designed only to separate people from their money." He continued:

"Persons claiming to have expert knowledge which, in fact, they seldom possess, offer for a price to advise clients throughout the country when to buy and sell stocks. Investors are urged to submit lists of their security holdings.

"Sometimes such lists are handed over to unscrupulous promoters who endeavor to induce the owners to exchange valuable securities for worthless stock. The whole practice tends only to encourage speculation and to undermine the efforts of the Administration to bring about a normal and healthy industrial recovery. • • •

"The public is warned against believing in the value of the prognostications or prophecies of any person who attempts to foretell the future value of any securities of any kind or who attempts to sell information or guesses on the future action of the market."

Farley referred to the new securities law, which requires publicity of the full financial facts behind any new securities issue.

"The public is invited," he said, "to call the attention of the Federal Trade Commission or the Postmaster General to any advertisements in papers, magazines or by mail which in the opinion of any individual do not live up to the regulations of the new securities act."

U. S. to Force Europe's Hand On Sincerity

Will Use Silver Agreement as Showdown Basis at Conference.

London, July 16 (U.P.).—The United States delegation to the World Economic Conference planned tonight to force a showdown Tuesday to "test Europe's sincerity."

The plan, as revealed to the United Press by a spokesman for the delegation, will revolve upon the silver agreement program offered by Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada.

United States delegates gave strong indication that they suspect a scheme on the part of the European gold bloc to frustrate this plan as a tactical maneuver to cause the United States to reveal its stabilization policy.

The Americans have no intention of tipping their hands on stabilization—even if President Roosevelt, at Washington, would allow them to, which is doubtful—and they intimated that if the gold bloc proceeded with its reported plan, the United States might go so far as to decline to participate in the conference when plenary sessions are resumed late this month.

Pittman worked all day today on the draft of a new silver plan embodying four major points and containing a basic eight-power agreement. This he plans to offer for consideration by the monetary committee of the conference Tuesday.

"This agreement furnishes a test of Europe's sincerity," the American spokesman said.

The revised Pittman plan is designed to overcome the objections of Holland, but there was general fear among American delegates that Holland would continue obdurate.

Ishii Believes London Parley Could Succeed

Air Talk Pledges Japan's Cooperation and Calls Caution Essential.

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—Reiterating a conviction that failure of the World Economic Conference would spell "untold disaster," Japan's chief delegate, Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, expressed confidence in a radio speech from London today that the conference can be made to succeed.

"I am sure that the success of the conference can be achieved if all the nations will work together in the spirit of mutual helpfulness," said the text of his speech made available here. He said Japan stood ready to offer "all in her power to make the conference achieve the object for which it has been convened."

Expressing the belief the conference would resume deliberations next fall, Viscount Ishii said:

"It is natural that we should not expect to make rapid progress in a matter of such magnitude and far-reaching effect as the reconstruction of the economic world. We have to go along with caution and mature deliberation. We will not make haste, but at the same time we should not take our steps with hesitancy."

War on Bootleg Oil Under Way By Government

Orders Issued to Help Producing States Cut Well Flow.

(Associated Press.)

In an effort to throttle the excess production which has threatened ruin to the great oil industry, the Federal Government yesterday issued regulations to prevent shipment in interstate commerce of petroleum produced in defiance of State authorities.

This action by Secretary Ickes, pursuant to an executive order by President Roosevelt last week, marked the Federal Government's first attempt to use its power in aiding States to curb wasteful and excess oil production.

Issued under authority of the industrial recovery act, the regulations opened a new phase of the administration's drive to restore prosperity. The oil industry will be the objective of another move in this direction next Monday when hearings open on its proposed code of fair competition.

Interior Department lawyers worked day and night to get out the far-reaching regulations under which President Roosevelt's orders will be enforced.

The regulations directed all oil producers and shippers to report monthly to the Interior Department's division of investigations.

All transportation agencies were forbidden to accept petroleum or its products for shipment without sworn affidavits that it was legally produced, together with supporting evidence.

Every producer of petroleum is required to file monthly reports, beginning August 5, on production, sales and shipments, and a statement that none of it was in violation of regulations.

All shippers must file reports on all petroleum received, its disposition and a declaration that "upon information and belief" none was handled in violation of regulations.

Code Extended To Textile Mills

shall bear the same relation to the new minimum that they did to the old. Also it was arranged that mill office workers shall be employed an average of 40 hours a week over a six months' period, rather than a flat 40 each week.

George A. Sloan, chairman of the industry's steering committee, last night dispatched telegrams to all mills advising them of the changes made in the Presidential conditions. In exchange for these alterations the industry formally subscribed to the Roosevelt requirements, giving them the same force as the code itself.

Not Considered Precedent.

This, Johnson explained, does not constitute a precedent under which Presidential alterations would have to be ratified by industry every time. That question is not decided and will not have to be in the case of cotton.

With Mr. Roosevelt also was Secretary Ickes, who is directing the $3,300,000,000 public works program.

Ickes said no decision had been reached on specific rivers and harbors and flood control projects and that "the closest scrutiny" would be given to every proposition.

He added that in the next two days he expected to complete his organization of State administrative boards and regional directors.

Lumber Code Discussed.

Ickes said general principles to govern new projects were discussed with the President. In response to inquiries he added that Mr. Roosevelt indicated a 9-foot channel for the upper Mississippi River to cost approximately $40,000,000 came within the scope of these principles.

Secretary Wallace of the Agriculture Department took up with the President the proposed code for lumber and the President's plans for forestry work.

Gen. Johnson went directly to his office in Washington and there was a prospect that the general order under contemplation by the administration for maximum hours and minimum wages and a controlled production might be placed in effect within 48 hours.

Cruises Near Benedict.

Benedict, Md., July 16 (A.P.).—President Roosevelt today cruised in the vicinity of Benedict on the Government yacht Sequoia, while he conferred with the administrators of his industrial recovery and public works programs for boosting American business.

Late in the day the yacht pulled in here to permit the departure of Louis M. Howe, one of the President's secretaries, for Washington. The President then continued his cruise, planning to leave here for the Capital about 7 p. m., Eastern standard time. The President had with him his recovery administrators, Secretary Ickes, in charge of the public works program, and Hugh S. Johnson, the chief of the industrial board.

Flying in a naval plane, they joined the President aboard the Sequoia at Solomons Island in Chesapeake Bay early today.

Police Guard Ortiz Rubio's Home on Coast

No Clues Are Obtained Yet of Threats to Former Mexican President.

San Diego, Calif., July 16 (A.P.). City police joined private guards at the home of Pascual Ortiz Rubio, former president of Mexico, today to protect him against the kidnaping threatened twice in anonymous telephone messages.

"I feel safe in promising that neither Ortiz Rubio nor any member of his family will be harmed," said Chief of Police Harry Raymond. "There are no known gangsters here."

Ortiz Rubio, his wife and three children were under the guard at their Parkside home.

The telephone caller, speaking in English, demanded $50,000. The first call was made July 7. Ortiz Rubio was instructed to obtain cash and leave it at a designated spot. Confident his personal guard could cope with the situation, he did not comply with instructions nor did he notify police.

Yesterday the second call came, apparently from the same man.

"Do as we told or the president will be abducted and something worse may happen to him," the former president's secretary said he was told. "This is the last chance."

Chief Raymond said that threats were being investigated, but no clue had been obtained so far as to the identity of the caller.

Ortiz Rubio, who resigned last year and was succeeded by Abelardo Rodriguez as president of Mexico, was in seclusion and would see no one.

Guard Flier Killed When Plane Cracks

Detroit, July 16 (A.P.).—Lieut. Joseph Arlie Muffatt, 28, of the Michigan National Guard, fell to his death near Wayne County Airport this afternoon when a wing came off his plane at an altitude of 3,000 feet. Private Robert Carr, his observer, jumped to safety with his parachute.

Lieut. Muffatt's parachute still was strapped to his body when he was pulled from the wreckage.

His associates said he probably was struck by a piece of the wing and was stunned.

Cosgrave Favors British Accord

Kiltimach, Irish Free State, July 16 (A.P.).—William T. Cosgrave, former president, said in a speech here tonight that the land annuities dispute with Great Britain should be settled and the economic warfare between the two countries ended.

The economic conflict, he asserted, has cost the Irish Free State £250,000 a week, adding, "unlike any other country we brought a serious economic crisis on ourselves."

The proper course to be pursued, Cosgrave said, would be for the Free State to arrange a conference with the British government and point out that a settlement of the dispute would be sound business for both countries.

Bridge Workers' Strike Set Today

New Orleans, La., July 16 (U.P.). More than 450 skilled workers and common laborers employed in construction work on the $13,000,000 Huey P. Long bridge that will span the Mississippi River here today voted to go on strike Monday morning unless their demands for pay increases ranging up to 100 per cent are met.

The bridge workers' representatives announced picketing to prevent strike-breaking would be started tomorrow morning. Workers will report for duty as usual tomorrow morning, and foremen in charge of the various divisions will present their demands. If they are not met immediately, the strike will be called, it was announced.

Contractors, informed of the impending strike, declined to say what course they might take.

Sweeney Funeral Wednesday.

Gary, Ind., July 16 (A.P.).—Funeral services will be held Wednesday for John M. Sweeney, retired first vice president of the General American Transportation Corporation. Sweeny, 70, died Saturday. Formerly he was in the auditing department of the Illinois Steel Co.

Women Urged To Fight for Public Office

Miss Lena Phillips Tells Meeting Clubs Absorb Their Activities.

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—If all the women's clubs were to close up for five years, said Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, who tonight opened an economic conference termed representative of the world's best feminine minds, there would be more women holding public office.

Miss Phillips hastened to add, however, she approved women's club work, but said instead of passing resolutions they should get down to actual work if they expected accomplishments. She has been among organizers of several club groups.

Her remark was made as she discussed informally the objectives and significance of the International Congress of Women, which has drawn delegations, many of whose members have achieved high recognition in their own countries, here from 30 different nations.

The congress, which is believed the first at which women will make a direct attack on world problems, was called by the National Council of Women, which Miss Phillips, a New York attorney, heads as president.

Political Desires Wane.

"We all require a certain amount of ego satisfaction," continued Miss Phillips. "Women turn to their clubs and they use up all their craving for politics in their organizations. They have little left when it comes to fighting for public office.

"But they must get into public life. They must take a hand at handling world affairs. Women's clubs must stop passing resolutions and start acting."

She would have individual club members get out and run for public office.

All this she expressed in the deep rich voice with which she was to sound the keynote of the convention: "Shall it be progress?"

"This conference, based on the general theme, 'Civilization, our common cause,' is a challenge, not only to the world, but to women themselves. Can they handle reality?"

Thinking as Human Beings.

"It is important that this is perhaps the first time that women have drawn up a program for women in which the emphasis is not on the feminine angle alone.

"The subjects reveal that women are thinking perhaps for the first time not as women but as human beings under a changing civilization."

The program to which she referred embraces nearly every phase of modern thinking, modern government and modern living. The ideas of Fascists are to be heard with those of Democracy and Communism. Youth will have its say along with age and experience. Its more than 100 speakers, both men and women, are recognized experts in their fields. It deals in round tables and general session, with birth control, music, the future of education, social hygiene and industrial planning.

Farmers to Make Hay From Cotton

Jackson, Miss., July 16 (U.P.).—Mississippi farmers are going to make hay out of the cotton they have agreed to destroy in the Government's cotton acreage reduction program.

The plan was announced today by J. C. Holton, State commissioner of agriculture, who said that instead of plowing up their abandoned cotton, farmers would harvest it for hay when it reached the proper growth.

Holton estimated feed value of the abandoned cotton to Dixie planters at $100,000,000, saying such value would approach $12 per acre.

A test of cotton plants' protein content, he explained, has shown it to be higher than that of alfalfa hay.

Physicians predicted that unless unexpected complicatoins develop, the banker would be all right again within a few days.

Luer and his wife were sitting in their comfortable home, listening to a radio program, when someone knocked on their door last Monday night. Mrs. Luer answered.

An expensively dressed and attractive woman asked if she might use the telephone. Mrs. Luer consented, smiling.

The woman walked to the telephone and clipped the wires with a pair of scissors which she drew from a pocketbook. A man then entered and started to drag Luer away. Mrs. Luer tried to fight off the man, who hurled her across the room. Her head struck a mantel, cutting a severe gash in her scalp.

Another man then entered and the two dragged Luer to an automobile. Mrs. Luer ran after them, screaming. Her son, Carl, heard the screams and ran from his home in time to see the automobile leaving.

His Boat Sunk, Man Drowns on Trot Line

Baton Rouge, La., July 16 (U.P.). Joseph Lang, 29, was drowned in the Mississippi here when he was caught on a trot line under water while attempting to salvage his motor boat which had sunk.

Lang had been on a fishing trip with this 12-year-old nephew, Willie Lang. Their boat struck a snag and sank. Lang dived to salvage what he could from the boat, and his trousers hooked on a line set by fishermen.

American Aviatrix, 24, Ready To Help Wiley Post in Siberia

Fay Gillis Makes All Plans for Refueling, Will Act as His Interpreter.

Novosibirsk, Siberia, July 16 (A. P.).—Waiting here to help Wiley Post when he arrives on his globe-circling solo flight is a 24-year-old American girl flier, Fay Gillis.

She not only has made all refueling and rest arrangements, but will act as the aviator's interpreter during his brief halt at this Far Eastern outpost.

(Previous plans for Miss Gillis to fly from Novosibirsk to Khabarovsk, Siberia, with the pilot were cancelled Sunday in New York by Lee Trenholm, Post's manager.)

Fay, who is one of the few women members of the Caterpillar Club—that exclusive group of fliers who have had to take to parachutes for their lives—has been here three weeks acting as Post's personal representative.

Everything In Readiness.

She has been telling local airport officials just what he will need in the way of food and fuel and has been getting everything in readiness to speed the Oklahoman's voyage over the latter half of Russia.

"We're all set now," she said today when told that Post had taken off from Berlin.

"The local air administration and the secretary of the district central executive committee here have done everything to facilitate his arrival and departure.

"They have mowed the grass on the landing field, set aside a special room where he can rest at the airport, and even arranged a menu for the meal they will have ready for him.

"The landing field is in excellent shape and is equipped for night operation with a special weather bureau on the ground."

She first met Post and flew with him in the fall of 1931 when she made a visit of several months to the United States.

"I am saving my last piece of American soap for him, which he ought to appreciate," Miss Gillis said.

Arranges Gasoline Supply.

Among the supplies she has gathered here are two tons of gasoline and a half ton of oil, more than enough to fill the tanks of Post's plane.

"Wiley did not tell me where he was going to put me, but I would straddle the tail of the plane, if necessary, to go along with him," the American girl said today before she learned that the plans for her to fly from this place to Khabarovsk had been canceled.

Fay lives with her sister, Beth, in Moscow, while her father and mother are away on an engineering job.

FAY GILLIS.

10,000 High Point Workers to Strike

Picket Lines to Be Set Up at Hosiery and Furniture Mills Today.

High Point, N. C., July 16 (A.P.). A strike of 10,000 hosiery and furniture workers here tomorrow appeared inevitable tonight, following a mass meeting sponsored by the Industrial Workers Association.

Representatives of 6,000 seamless hosiery workers and approximately 2,500 furniture wood makers pledged themselves not to report to work tomorrow.

Picket lines will be established when the first shifts are scheduled to go on duty at 5 a. m. But the workers were urged tonight to maintain order and conduct the strike peacefully.

Plane Falls at Circus, Killing 2 Detroit Pilots

Port Huron, Mich., July 16 (A.P.). Within sight of a large crowd attending an air circus, two Detroit airmen plunged to their deaths this afternoon while attempting a bombing stunt.

The victims were Henry J. Vermootel, 34, the pilot, and George A. Dunn, 29, the observer.

Flying at an altitude of 150 feet, Vermootel put his plane into a steep bank and the ship went into a nose dive. In the crowd was Vermootel's wife, Faye, 24.

4,000 Steel Workers' Unionization Starts

Portsmouth, Ohio, July 16 (A.P.). First steps toward possible unionization of workers at the Wheeling Steel Corporation's new Boston plant were taken at a mass meeting last night.

Upwards of 500 workers attended the meeting and heard a talk by a representative of the American Federation of Labor. They took no definite action, but appointed a committee to make a further investigation and report at another convergence to be held some time this week. The plant employs approximately 4,000 men.

Huey Long's Paper Called Shakedown

State Employes Forced to Subscribe to New Weekly Is Charge.

New Orleans, July 16 (U.P.).—The New Orleans Times-Picayune, anti-Long newspaper, today asserted that mass subscriptions were being assessed upon employes of the State government to finance Senator Huey P. Long's projected weekly, the American Progress.

Dr. Joseph A. O'Hara, president of the State Board of Health and leader of the Long organization in New Orleans, declared all subscriptions were "voluntary," and said "no order has been issued to State employes to subscribe to the weekly."

Men who described themselves as employes of the State, whose identities the Times-Picayune did not divulge, called the newspaper Saturday morning, saying ward leaders of the Long organization had appeared at pay windows and collected from them 5 to 15 per cent of their wages for subscriptions to the weekly, the story stated.

Every member of the State university staff was reported to have received a letter from the senator last week urging a subscription to the weekly.

Husband-Killing Trial Due Today

Wife Charged With Death Certain of Acquittal in Poison Slaying.

Salem, Mass., July 16 (U.P.).—With calm assurance, still maintaining the remarkable poise she has shown since her arrest, Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, charged with the poison murder of her husband, tonight awaited in Essex County jail the opening of her trial here tomorrow.

To friends from Peabody, who visited her today, she expressed complete confidence in her acquittal and told of her longing to be reunited with her three children.

"I'm ready for it," she said. "I've waited so long for a chance to be vindicated."

Apostrophe to the Horse.

O noblest of animals, you're a rare gift from God! What path have we traveled that you have not trod? A helper to all, whether peasant or king—O, horse, all mankind your praises must sing!

A constant companion and friend when in need on desert and battlefield, prairie and mead; on race course or lending your strength to the plow, you have stood the great test and to you we must bow!

From time immemorial down to this day, Barb, Arab or Mustang, Percheron or Bay—whether roaming the valley or hitched to a cart, in the drama of Nations you have played a great part.

On your mane rests a crown of service and trust, and a place in man's heart, until unto dust like man you returneth and your rest justly earned, no more shall you yearn for the sod you have turned.

The auto, the airplane, the fast-flying train have deposed a great ruler—have ended his reign! But ever and always some service you'll be, beloved of God's creatures on land or on sea!—Rudolph Spires Allen, Animal Industry, Agriculture, College Park, Md.

THE Federal employes having suffered a major operation—a 15 per cent cut in salary a generous Government now contemplates allowing them up to 90 days vacation, without pay, in which to starve, get another job or commit suicide.

The heads of the Government of today should remember that the commissions, high-salaried efficiency experts and practitioners of other tom-foolery were unable to wreck the works only because the average clerks exerted a steadying influence; and should show some gratitude for the preservation of something for them to administer and less attention to wildcat budget balancing experimenters. Treat the loyal hired help with wholesome mercy and when the budget is balanced their minds will not be unbalanced.—W. W.

17 in Conservation Camp Under Arrest

Portsmouth, Ohio, July 16 (A.P.).—Armed with pistols for the first time since they were assigned to Civilian Conservation Corps duty, Regular Army officers at the Negro camp in Shawnee Forest, Scioto County, were maintaining order today after a disturbance last night resulting in the arrest of 17 members of the corps.

The trouble was said to have started when officers began to reorganize the camp yesterday and assigned new squad leaders, some of whom were objectionable to the men.

Officers said some of the Negroes in the camp had been dissatisfied with the pay and others were loafing on the job. After the flare-up last night, Sheriff A. Bridwell, of Scioto County, appointed several of the camp officers deputy sheriffs to preserve order at the camp.

TO SOME as yet unknown California scientist may shortly be given the distinction of being the first man in history to sit with his eye glued to a novel instrument, calmly watching the forces accumulate which will eventually result in an earthquake, and, if he is fortunate enough to survive the resulting cataclysm, of reporting to his fellows exactly what happened during those awe-inspiring moments when the earth trembled.

This sounds very interesting, but how is he going to know when the earthquake is about to happen? Well, that's the easiest part of the entire undertaking. For a long time earthquake observers have noted slow, progressive changes in their recording instruments, which from time to time require the indicating devices to be reset, so they do not "run off" the charts.

From this, the Bureau of Standards has developed a special device to study these tilts, as they are technically known, and several of the instruments have been set up at the Geological Survey's seismographic observatory at Cheltenham, Md., and in Rock Creek Park, Washington.

However, earthquakes are practically unknown at either of these points, and so three of the instruments are to be sent to the University of California, at Berkeley, near San Francisco, and set up on a "fault" in the earth's crust, which is located on the campus, and there the watch will begin, for it is along these faults that quakes may be expected to occur, and if they run according to expectations, some mighty interesting data will be obtained.

According to G. E. Merritt, of the bureau, who has been actively engaged in the development of the tiltometer, it should be entirely possible to predict the shake very definitely from the readings. However, as in the case of any new device, much is yet to be learned. For instance, changes of temperature or vibration will affect the delicate instrument, and so it must be installed in a deep pit, where it is read by means of a telescope. And it is also possible to locate it so exactly on the path of the quake that the readings will all be vertical, which, of course, would be valueless.

Scientists are greatly interested in the California variety of quake, according to Mr. Merritt, because it does not follow the conventional action. The usual quake is a fracture like that taking place when a cracker is broken; that is, the center is raised and both ends drop. On the Coast, however, they seem to have additional movement, the broken parts moving up and down the coast line in a north and south direction, and the scientists are anxious to study the forces which are built up before the actual shock in an effort to solve this strange phenomenon.

IT is saddening to read in your column Sunday morning the comment about Capt. Baldwin. Age may bring infirmities and idiosyncrasies that cause us impatience but it is an eternal truth that this old man has vigorously given the best years of his life to a hard and hazardous work that has notably added to the sum total of all human knowledge and thereby contributed to the comfort and welfare of all humanity, living and to come, and added prestige and brought credit to the honor of this Nation.

One feels much sympathy with the thousands of worthy folk who have been thrown out of employment by Government policies. These people are good, solid, public servants who have given their lives to maintaining their perfectly honorable places on the taxpayers' pay roll. It has been their part to render necessary undistinguished routine work, but this service can hardly be classified in the same bracket with the historic services of Capt. Evelyn Briggs Baldwin.

If Byrd, Peary, Greeley and others have earned an honorable and comfortable support from the Government for life, surely so has the man who discovered Graham Bell Land, surveyed Franz Josef Land, invented the mooring mast and made the great scientific Arctic sledge trek of history. Even the person who wrote the questionable jocularities that appeared in Sunday's morning's Diary should be willing to help to save a man like Capt. Baldwin from charity or worse. After all, he is over 71, impoverished through no fault of his own and his neglect and abandonment is just as much a disgrace to our Nation as would be the neglect of the Washington Monument.

I SUGGEST therefore that those who are suffering from the present Government policies will serve their own cause much more effectively by helping to secure relief for the distress of an old, old man, who in happier days carved a permanent place for his name among those who have made the Nation great, than by uttering puerile flippancies such as you published Sunday morning.

After all, by drawing attention to his trouble they are focusing public notice on their own.

I feel ashamed to think that there are those among us who would write such thoughtless words to add to the hurt and degradation of a broken old man.

ARNOLD KRUCKMAN.

War Department Employes Retire.

Frank B. Hunt and Charles Rintz, Construction Division, Office of the Quartermaster General, War Department, were honored at a surprise luncheon given in their honor upon retirement Saturday. Two score or more friends and fellow-workers played host to these men. Miss Alice Hunt, daughter of Mr. Hunt, and Mrs. Charles Rintz were among the guests who attended.

As both have often spoken of their intentions and plans to spend their leisure in traveling, they were presented with handsome traveling suitcases. A. B. Moreland, principal clerk, Construction Division, made a little speech in praise of the conduct and service of both the retiring men and presented one of the cases to Mr. Hunt, who responded with a sentiment of appreciation.

Joseph A. Bayer, chief, Funds and Estimates Branch, in which both employes worked, also gave a short speech in recognition of the services of the men, and presented a traveling case to Mr. Rintz who thanked his many friends for their display of affection.

Both have given 35 years or more of excellent service to their Government and now their coworkers wish them long life and good health upon their retirement.

Firemen to Pay Special Honor To Washington

First Volunteer Blaze Battler Will Receive Tribute at Parade.

Tribute will be paid to America's first volunteer fireman—George Washington—when fire fighters from all parts of the country gather here this year for the eleventh annual national firemen's Labor Day parade.

A wreath from the firemen of this country will be placed on Washington's grave in simple but impressive ceremony.

The first President was known as a man who quickly realized the value of organized units to combat one of man's most destructive enemies—fire. Following the organization of volunteers in Alexandria, thousands of such groups have sprung up in every State in the Union.

Always Ready to Serve.

Volunteer firemen now form one of the greatest, most heroic and unselfish organizations of men banded together for civic good. In all parts of America these fire fighters stand ever ready to spill out of their beds at midnight, or leave their business during the day, to save the home or property of their neighbors.

Their total, numbering many thousands, never receive pay. They risk their lives day in and day out in the service of their communities, and many of ranks have died in the line of duty. Nevertheless, the number of volunteer firemen grows larger each year.

More pretentious equipment is constantly added to their departments. Greater care is given to fighting fire, and greater is the benefit derived by cities, towns and hamlets from their efforts.

Many of the finest volunteer companies in this section of the country have purchased their own trucks, hose and other equipment through funds raised by themselves. In some cases, townships have never contributed one penny to their upkeep.

In volunteer companies, leading men of the community are generally found. Druggists, doctors, plumbers, carpenters, ministers, farmers, and merchants make up their ranks, along with other crafts and professions of the American.

Mostly, they govern themselves, decide their routine and discipline their recruits. Hardly anywhere, can one find a better spirit of organization and cooperation.

Constant Drilling.

The day is past when the volunteer firemen satisfied himself with the thought that when a fire broke out he would drag out the apparatus and do his best to pour water on it. Instead, he is constantly drilling and studying the newest methods of combating flame.

They pride themselves on their application to duty and the way they keep their trucks, apparatus and fire companies. Constantly, they are competing against one another for excellence in firefighting.

Members of the parade committee, at work on this year's celebration, are giving more attention than ever before to the volunteer firemen. Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, the parade marshal, is the spirit behind much of it.

Friends said she had been in ill health since an operation some time ago and lived in constant fear of having to undergo further surgical treatment.

Cannon Foresees Need of New Party

Attacks Farley, Calling Repeal Moral Issue, Not Political.

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, jr., said in a statement last night that "if the present political parties of the Nation actually come under the domination of those elements which stand for the general liberalization of the moral legislation of State and Nation, then the moral forces of the country must inevitably come together to consider seriously the formation of a new party."

The Southern Methodist churchman and prohibition advocate referred to Postmaster General Farley as "another Roman Catholic Knight of Columbus" who "has knowing and wilfully branded as disloyal to the Democratic party and to the administration all Southern Methodists, Baptists and others who oppose repeal of the eighteenth amendment as a moral and not a partisan political issue."

Citing action of the Southern Methodist Church and the Southern Baptist Convention in opposing prohibition repeal, Bishop Cannon added that, "notwithstanding the well-known attitude of these great Protestant churches, the President of the United States has publicly made the repeal of the eighteenth amendment a political party measure."

Further Survey Asked On Missouri Channel

Col. George R. Spalding said last night he had recommended to War Department engineers that further investigation be made before the deep-water channel for the upper Missouri River is authorized, expressing the belief that there was insufficient water for good navigation.

Noted Scientist Installs Rivals' Device for Test

Dr. Compton, Once Nobel Prize Winner, Proves Self Sportsman.

Chicago, July 16 (U.P.).—Dr. Arthur H. Compton once won a Nobel prize in science, and he now has proved he is just as good a sportsman as he is a student.

Dr. Compton, of Chicago University, has spent years studying the cosmic ray. He has perfected equipment which he believes will record, when taken into the stratosphere, the true history of these mysterious rays.

Out in California Dr. Robert A. Millikan, another Nobel prize winner, also has made extensive studies of these same rays and has also perfected equipment to capture their history. His equipment is, however, quite different from Dr. Compton's, because the opinions of these two world-noted scientists differ concerning the subject.

When the Piccard balloon takes off into the stratosphere, probably within the next week, it will carry both Compton and Millikan equipment. Scientists believe the flight will prove definitely which of the two scientists is right because their theories will be tested unded identic conditions.

Compton was in the East on important business when installation of his equipment in the balloon started a few days ago. He remained in the East, leaving the installation to assistants.

Then came the time to install Millikan's equipment.

Dr. Compton, at considerable inconvenience and expense, dropped his work in the East and hurried back to Chicago to supervise personally the installation of his rival's equipment.

Tuberculosis Fight Widened In Alexandria

First of X-Ray Clinics to Be Held July 26 by Association.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria branch of the Antituberculosis Association, working with the State association, has arranged for a series of chest and X-ray clinics, the first of which will be held July 26, with another on November 7, and X-ray clinics from February 19 to February 23, 1934.

Wendell Eaves, chairman of the education program, is arranging for an educational conference between the parents and all organizations for October. There will be an educational and health program in all the public schools in order to aid in reducing tuberculosis. The promotors of the conference point out that this should be of interest to parents.

The clinics given by the State authorities are in addition to those by the local association, and will result in a total of approximately ten clinics for the year. The local clinics are conducted at the city health office, by Dr. H. A. Latane and Dr. Llewellyn Powell, and are free.

Plans are being formulated for a Parent-Teachers conference, composed of representatives of Parent-Teachers Associations of Alexandria, to be held in October, according to W. R. Eaves, principal of the Jefferson School.

Sessions of the conference will be held afternoon and evenings. The afternoon sessions will be devoted to round table discussions. It is planned to have a number of prominent speakers for the evening sessions. The principal subjects for discussion will be health, relief, and the school and its relationship to the home.

It is planned to have the conference a purely local affair, with chairmen of the various committees to map out plans for work as soon as the organization is perfected.

William Clarke Beeler, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Beeler, died yesterday at the home of his parents in Duke street extended. The body was taken to Wheatley's funeral home and will be sent to Starr Tannery, Va., for burial.

Arms Parley 'Sawing Wood,' Says Col. Howe

Conference "Not Dead Nor Dying," Says Secretary to President.

The Disarmament Conference is not "dead or dying" but "saying nothing and sawing wood," Col. Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, said last night in a radio interview by Walter Trumbull, Washington correspondent.

Explaining the President's efforts to curtail armaments by weakening the power of attack and invasion, Col. Howe said that although the council has adjourned until October 16, subcommittees are now at work on the program and the outlook is not a dark one. Asked if there is reason to believe some of Roosevelt's recommendations may be adopted, the Chief Executive's secretary replied:

"The best of reasons. Nations have a growing realization that they must deal effectively with these questions—or get ready for war."

Col. Howe expressed doubt that the Economic Conference will have any effect on the arms session, or vice versa. He said European budget balancing would benefit by a world-wide arms agreement and economic recovery thus would be hastened.

In the opening of the interview, the presidential secretary said he had been house-hunting with his chief over the week-end; looking for Maryland places with historical associations.

Takoma Park Motorist Held as Drunk Driver

Bernard D. Day, of 310 Hancock avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was arrested last night on charges of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

He was apprehended by Sergt. Al Thomas and Policeman Earl Thomas, of the Montgomery County Police. They said Day's driving aroused their suspicion.

House Hunter

President Leaves Sequoia to Inspect Old Homes Near Crisfield.

(Associated Press.)

Louis McHenry Howe, Secretary to the President, in an address last night said Mr. Roosevelt was "house hunting" on the Eastern Maryland shore.

Explaining, he said the President was possibly better informed "on the first 50 years history of the United States than any other man in the country," and said a list of old houses in the Crisfield vicinity had been made up for Mr. Roosevelt to see.

Howe's remarks were distributed in mimeographed form Saturday at a time when denials were being given at the White House that the President was to leave the Sequoia at Crisfield.

The stipulation was made that Howe's information was not to be published before 9 o'clock (Eastern standard time) last evening.

A little after the distribution of the text of Howe's speech with the stipulation that it should not be made public until delivered, the White House made public the following statement:

"A dispatch received at 7:20 p. m. today through naval communications stated that the Sequoia, with the President and his party aboard, put in a Crisfield, Md., this morning and that the party went by motor to Pocomoke and Snow Hill and then back to Crisfield.

"On the motor trip the President saw a number of the old historic houses in that section.

"The dispatch added that the Sequoia put out to Chesapeake Bay for the night."

Survivors Tell Of Explosion on Tanker at Sea

1st Blast Tore Away Ship's Wireless; Doomed Petrol Reached by Steamer.

Charleston, S. C., July 16 (A.P.).—A story of a day-long battle against flames on a blazing oil tanker in a heavy sea, whipped by a strong wind, and, finally, rescue was brought to this port today by 36 survivors of the Cities Service Petrol.

They left behind Capt. F. L. Sears, of Dennis, Mass., master of the tanker, and George R. Binninger, of Indianapolis, a wiper, who went down when the vessel sank late Friday night off the North Carolina coast.

Capt. Sears refused to enter a lifeboat and went down with his ship. Binninger perished in the explosion, of undetermined origin, that started the fire about 9:30 Friday morning. He was trapped by a bursting steam pipe.

Rescued at Nightfall.

Survivors were brought just outside the harbor by the tanker Gulf Gem, and the steamer Trimountain, which reached the doomed Petrol at nightfall Friday after the officers and crew had battled the flames all day.

The first explosion, they said, tore away the tanker's wireless and it was impossible to summon aid.

Ten survivors, all uninjured except for slight burns and bruises, were removed from the Trimountain by the tug Cecilia, of Charleston. Twenty-six others, including two seriously injured, were transferred from the Gulf Gem to a Coast Guard patrol boat, which landed them here at 9 o'clock this morning.

The two badly injured—Second Assistant Engineer William J. Emsley, Somerset, Mass., and Messman John J. Sandow, Newark, N. J.—were taken to a hospital, while a representative of the Cities Service Transportation Co., owner of the vessel, arranged to send the others to New York.

With blazing oil streaming over the Cities Service Petrol and over the adjacent ocean, hope of rescue for the nearly two score men aboard was growing dim, First Mate August A. Harlan said, when the Trimountain and the Gulf Gem hove in view about 8:15 p. m. They had been attracted by the flames rising from the ship, which could be seen for miles.

The two ships took aboard 27 men of the Petrol crew. Then a life boat manned by the second mate and five sailors of the Gem and Harlan succeeded in taking the nine remaining men from the burning ship. Capt. Sears was with the nine on the vessel, but he declined to leave with them.

Demands on Relief Slacken As Recovery Plan Operates

Seasonal Trade Gains and Summer Gardens Also Relieve Charity.

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—Treasuries of unemployment relief funds are benefiting from shortening bread lines and newly created jobs in nearly every section of the land.

Demands on public charity have relaxed tremendously in many sections since the Roosevelt administration's industrial recovery move has taken effect. Seasonal gains in business and summer truck gardens have aided, welfare workers said today, in taking thousands of families off the relief lists, although leaving hundreds of thousands still to be helped.

Six States, however, reported increases in their charity bills since employment began to pick up in April.

Grasshoppers and poor crops were blamed in North Dakota, depletion of savings in Nebraska and Arizona, severe drought in Texas. Arizona's expenditures increased from $328,142 in March to $346,230 in May. Texas' case load was 31 per cent greater in July than the previous month. Florida spent $582,411 in March and $651,260 in June, Montana $349,179 in March against $354,022 in May.

Virginia Outlook Better.

But elsewhere the pictures were brighter, and nowhere more so than in Virginia, according to a survey today. A reduction of about 28 per cent was effected between March and June on the basis of representative reports indicating the total of unemployed fell from 125,000 to 35,000.

Funds expended totaled $1,173,000 in March as against $871,309 in April, May and June combined.

Connecticut lowered its total 25 per cent. Michigan felt the pressure relax by 15 per cent generally, by 35 per cent in industrial sections.

Pennsylvania is spending $750,000 less than in recent months.

North Carolina has cut its bill from $1,216,607 last March to $417,700 allotted for July. West Virginia's list of needy families is off 40,000 from last March, at 108,000. Kentucky has reduced its list from 145,910 at the end of May to 108,975.

Maryland Needs Vary.

Illinois expenditures are down 25.6 per cent, with the number of persons receiving relief less by 12 per cent. In March 178,634 families were on the rolls and $4,887,604 was spent, but in June this dropped to 148,743 families and $3,609,950.

Maryland's 23,382 needy families of July show an increase of 2,000 over March, but officials said wide fluctuations from week to week indicated little.

Wisconsin had 2,743 fewer families on relief rolls during May than in April, but increased cost of living and larger allowances permitted no reduction in the total of expenditures, officials said.

New Jersey Cuts Outlay.

Other States felt the inflationary program in the same way. Iowa's expenditures were "about the same as in March," despite a 5,000 drop in the number of families succored. Ohio had only a 1.6 per cent drop in four months with 19.7 per cent of its population on one relief list or another at present.

New Jersey got a 10 per cent cut in its relief roll and 5 per cent in expenditures. Rhode Island cut its burden in half, from 14,806 to 7,000. New Hampshire on the other hand felt only a slight change for the better, and Oregon none.

Jersey Youth Is Killed At Idaho Forest Camp

Boise, Idaho, July 16 (A.P.).—Frank Walsh, 21, of Union City, N. J., a Civilian Conservation Corps worker, died at the veterans' hospital here tonight of a broken neck suffered in a dive into shallow water at Centerville yesterday.

He was brought to Boise last night.

Pictures Vanish From Room In Which Lincoln Expired

Mystery Veils Disappearance of Two Prints From Tenth Street House.

Efforts to reproduce in detail the room in which Abraham Lincoln died at 516 Tenth street northwest have been marred by the loss of two simple pictures, it was learned yesterday.

Absence of the prints was noted by a Post reporter yesterday afternoon when he read a detailed description of the room, written the day Lincoln died by a scribe on the Washington Chronicle.

The pictures mentioned are "The Barnyard" and "The Stable," by Herring. A print of "The Blacksmith," by the same artist, also in the room at the time of the death of the Great Emancipator, has been preserved.

Fourth Picture Retained.

A fourth picture in the room at the time of Lincoln's death—"The Horsefair," by Rosa Bonheur—has also been retained.

But even other prints of the two missing pictures can't be found, Miss Helen F. Downing, permanent chairman of the patriotic women's societies, who have had charge of furnishing the two-story brick house, said last night.

The two pictures mentioned by the Chronicle reporter are discernable in a large painting of the death scene, which now hangs in the house.

Had Been No Inquires.

L. G. Reynolds, custodian of the home for the past seven years, said that no general emphasis has been placed on the missing pictures "because no one has been observant enough to ask about them."

Mrs. Downing believes that the pictures may have been retained by the family of William Petersen, who lived in the house at the time Lincoln was taken there from Ford's Theater. The last known relative of Mr. Petersen, Mrs. Pauline Petersen Wenzing, a sister, died in Baltimore early this year, it was learned.

Censorship Lifted On Cuba Newspapers

Havana, Cuba, July 16 (U.P.).—Havana newspapers appeared on the streets this afternoon without being censored as a result of the friendly intervention of Sumner Welles, United States Ambassador who is acting as mediator in attempting to solve Cuba's political problems. It was the first time censorship had been lifted completely in over a year. Welles, it was understood, persuaded all newspaper publishers to promise not to publish libelous or seditious matter.

Mercy in Youth Seen Best Old Age Insurance

Dr. Harmon Holds Blessed Those Who Live Life of Self-Abnegation.

"The best insurance against a hard old age is a merciful attitude toward others before the years come on," said Dr. H. H. Harmon, preaching yesterday morning at the National City Christian Church, Thomas circle.

Dr. Harmon drew his text from Matthew and his topic was "Who Are the Blessed?"

He said, in part:

"Many sermons have been preached from the beatitudes. Few passages of scripture are so familiar to Christian people everywhere as are the words from Christ's sermon on the Mount. They rank in familiarity with the Ten Commandments, the fifty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, the Twenty-third Psalm, the fourteenth chapter of John and the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians. We quote them consecutively and we catch much of their significance, and our hearts are charmed by their hearts and warmth, but we do well to observe them as illustrating a set of life principles.

"As life principles these Beatitudes reveal the values in life that are worth while. What are these principles which when followed achieve for us the ideal, the blessed life? Who are the blessed? First those who live the life of self abnegation. The first three beatitudes are the pictures of a soul that knows its own sin, weakness and need. 'Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.' The happy are not the proud, the conceited, the boastful, the bigoted, the overlords of society. Such attributes bring neither satisfaction to the individual, nor to others. The happy are those who in poverty of spirit are free from the conceit that offends. The path of humility leads through the arch of triumph.

"'Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted,' they that mourn for their sin and become genuinely penitent, they that endure any trial in these days incident to the national and worldwide industrial and economic situation, but seek the guidance and consolation of the Lord. Many witness beautifully by their heroism to the inner strength given them. Blesesd are they who mourn for those they have loved, but shall see no more in the flesh, they, too, shall know the comfort that comes from Him to whom they turn in weariness but in faith."

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Braithwaite rendered a duet, "God Is Love."

Major Sanford Found Dead in Virginia Home

Veteran Officer Served in World War, Spanish War, Philippine Insurrection.

Maj. Joseph L. Sanford, veteran of the World War, Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection, died late yesterday at the residence of Mrs. Lucy Payne, near Clifton, Va., where he made his home. He was 63 years old.

A sister of Mrs. Payne found the retired Army doctor lying lifeless across a bed when she entered the room with his dinner. He had been ill for several months.

Maj. Sanford, a native of Prince William County, Va., was graduated from Georgetown University Medical School 40 years ago. He received his preliminary training at St. John's College, Alexandria. He left his practice in Clifton at the outbreak of the Spanish War, entering the Army Medical Corps and serving in Puerto Rico.

After a long period of duty in the Philippines, he resigned, but reentered the service at the opening of the World War. He was stationed at Hattiesburg, Miss., in the Adjutant General's Department.

Since his retirement at the close of the war, Maj. Sanford lived at the Fairfax County home of Mrs. Payne. He was never married and had no surviving close relatives. Funeral arrangements will be made by the War Department. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Sweigert suffered a fractured skull. He died an hour later in the Washington County Hospital.

Ellsworth Hutzell, of Boonesboro, and J. L. McGinley, of Hagerstown, passengers in the Sweigert car, received cuts and bruises. Miss Harris and her sister, Winifred, who were in the other car, were only slightly injured.

The Price of Bread.

There is much ado about the price of bread. Secretary Wallace has taken a definite stand against "bread profiteering" and the Department of Justice is on the alert for any violations of the anti-trust laws by groups of bakers. Having added a tax to the rising price of wheat, the Government feels a keen responsibility in protecting the public against excessive prices for the staff of life. But the bakers, who are caught between a 50 per cent increase in the price of flour and a processing tax on the one hand and the efforts of the Government to keep bread prices down, fear that they are being persecuted.

The question at issue is not whether bread prices should rise but how far they should go. Secretary Wallace urges that increases be limited to "the amount involved in market commodity price increases plus the processing tax." In line with this policy the Bureau of Agricultural Economics has issued a statement saying that "any increase in bread prices which exceeds 1½ cents per pound loaf over the level existing last winter can not be justified on the basis of higher costs of materials to bakers." The cost of wheat is only a small item in the ultimate price of bread.

Bakers take a somewhat different view of the situation. The American Bakers Association gave a pledge to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration that "the baker will pass on to the consumer only so much as he is compelled to pay and no more." In some cases where profiteering has been reported, it is claimed that the higher prices were paid for 16-ounce loaves instead of the 12-ounce loaves that came into prominence during the depression.

So many elements enter into the cost of a loaf of bread that few experts will venture to say just what it should cost at the present time. The wages of bakers and delivery agents are an important factor. Officials in charge of the recovery program are attempting to raise wages to augment purchasing power and thus stimulate a greater demand for the products of industry. Can they agree with Secretary Wallace that bread prices should reflect only the increases in commodity prices?

The squabble over bread prices indicates the extreme difficulties that are encountered when the Government undertakes to control economic adjustments. No experts could fix a price for bread that would be satisfactory over a large area for any length of time. In the absence of any measuring rod that may be applied to bread prices to secure equity on all sides, the Government may find that competition is still the best safeguard of the public interests.

Elusive Peace.

The disappointment expressed by Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State, at the limited accomplishments in the field of world peace is shared by millions of people throughout the world. More confusion than achievement, says Mr. Colby, has resulted from the post-war conferences, pacts and programs. The Kellogg pact was widely accepted, but it is lightly ignored by nations with aggressive tendencies. The League of Nations has been singularly ineffective in preventing war in the Orient and in South America. None of the devices of post-war diplomacy, says Mr. Colby, has carried the world further along the road toward international accord than did the "old diplomacy," which was less spectacular.

Mr. Colby contemplates with the eyes of a veteran the results of the numerous efforts to promote world peace. Methods of approach to this fundamental problem have changed in recent years, but the nature of the problem itself remains the same. Statesmen who observe that the current anti-war measures are no more conclusive than those of the past are not to be blamed for their lack of enthusiasm for the new diplomacy.

Concepts of the old school diplomacy reassert themselves when new theories wane. Thus Mr. Colby revaluates neutrality:

> When we reflect that neutrality has, for centuries, operated to narrow the area of war and to protect peacefully disposed nations from war's ravages, it is not surprising that nations should be slow to relinquish it as a principle of action. * * * I am of the sincere belief that we have made little real and concrete progress, despite all our endeavors, in the field of internationalism.

It is not to be supposed that war can be abolished by agreements around a council table. International peace machinery is useless unless it can retain in times of emergency the support of the powers that establish it. The world is pretty much sated with formulas for insuring peace. But the struggle to convert all nations to peaceful policies, even though they may see temporary gains in war, still goes on. It is well to distinguish between the cause of peace itself and the devices by which some statesmen believe that peace may be attained.

Latin American Trade.

Negotiations are going forward for reciprocal tariff agreements with several Latin American countries. In announcing this effort to stimulate foreign trade, President Roosevelt called attention to some of the numerous difficulties which the negotiators are encountering.

Argentina is especially anxious to secure relaxation of the United States' quarantine laws against live stock from countries where the foot and mouth disease is prevalent. But officials and cattle growers in this country are not willing to risk the spread of this disease through the importation of cattle and meat products from the Argentine. The live stock industry is also anxious to retain the domestic market for its own products by the maintenance of an adequate protective tariff.

Many of the commodities exported by Argentina are also produced in surplus by the United States. The two countries have similar climates, and both are endowed with extensive prairies suitable for agriculture. Argentina sends abroad large quantities of meats, wheat, hides and wool, all of which are produced in large quantities here. Her most important exports to the United States are flaxseed, cattle hides, quebracho extract, carpet wool and furs. In turn the United States sends Argentina large quantities of machinery, automobiles, radio equipment, steel mill products, lubricating oil, gasoline, cotton yarn and cloth. For the most part the two countries exchange commodities that are peculiar to each and not highly competitive.

Attempts to negotiate a reciprocal tariff agreement with Argentina meet with the same difficulties that have defeated similar negotiations between this country and Canada for many years. The United States withdrew from a reciprocal agreement with Canada in 1866 because it proved unsatisfactory to the American industries that were thrown into competition with Canadian producers. Since that time numerous efforts to let down the tariff bars between the two countries have failed, chiefly because of the similarity of their raw products.

This difficulty does not extend to all of the countries in the western hemisphere. Brazil, for example, furnishes the United States with coffee and buys manufactured products in return. A large part of the exports from Latin America to this country is non-competitive; hence, 87 per cent of those imports come in without duty. The trade between the United States and most of the Latin American countries furnishes an excellent example of mutually profitable foreign commerce.

Reciprocal tariff agreements do not assume a role of major importance where so large a portion of the commerce between countries is on a free basis. Something might be accomplished by inducing Latin American countries that find extensive markets in the United States for their special products to give more favorable consideration to industrial exports from this country. But it would be difficult to make effective bargains of that type without specific authority from Congress.

Farm Land Banks Active.

Under the combined Farm Credit Administration the Federal Land Banks are enlarging the scope of their work in all the districts with the view of relieving many of the closed banks of farm mortgages, replacing these frozen assets with cash that will enable them to reopen and restore activity to the accounts of thousands of depositors. This work is being taken up by States, the most intensive campaign having been inaugurated in Wisconsin, where about $45,000,000 has been made available through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in exchange for Federal Land Bank bonds.

Arrangements have also been made on a somewhat smaller scale as yet to relieve closed banks of farm mortgages in Illinois, Iowa and South Carolina. While it is, naturally, the intention to extend relief of this character to all parts of the country, it is proceeding somewhat slowly owing to the necessity of a great enlargement of the corps of appraisers needed for examination of the properties under mortgage. This force already has been increased from 200 to 600, but many of the experienced appraisers are engaged in instructing the newer recruits. Fully 1,000 will be required.

In every case a bank's mortgage holdings are subject to examination and subjected to revaluation on the basis of reduced farm values. No general rules can be made for the extent to which the mortgages will be scaled down, each one necessarily being considered on its merits. Reports that reductions would amount to one-third are entirely misleading, as in some instances property may readily be worth the remaining face of the mortgage, while others may be valued at only half.

Present and prospective plans to take up bank holdings will aid some farmers through the reductions made in mortgages and other farmers who may be depositors.

Information for Investors.

Under the regulations issued by the Federal Trade Commission in conformity with the new security act the information which the issuers must provide will be so complete that every investor will be able to inform himself more fully than ever before as to the condition of the business and the extent of the resources behind the securities proposed. Much of this data must be summarized in the prospectus issued in connection with the flotation, but additional important details are on file and available at the offices of the Federal Trade Commission.

The prospectus is required to carry a condensed balance sheet together with the latest profit and loss account, but need not include supporting schedules in detail, provided the summarized statements do not omit necessary information which would tend to render them misleading. All the exhibits necessary to explain financial statements in every particular must be furnished to the commission, and any buyer who desires to make an exhaustive study of the history of the company and the factors bearing upon the ultimate value of the new securities can obtain a transcript of the complete record for a fee.

The various items which may be excluded from the prospectus include information regarding pending litigation which may affect the value of the security; details of any denial of a proposed issue; amortization provisions of all the issuer's bonds; a list of all holders of more than 10 per cent of all classes of stock; a list of company securities held by each director; the names and addresses of all underwriters and promoters of the issue; details regarding commissions and all existing contracts; profit and loss accounts of any business to be secured with proceeds of the new issue; a list of all subsidiaries and the percentage owned; a balance sheet prior to the one called for by the prospectus, and a complete explanation of the consolidation of accounts.

Saving the Palisades.

The towering palisades on the west bank of the Hudson opposite New York City have been spared from desecration at the hands of quarrymen, and plans for the construction of a park and driveway along the picturesque heights are assured by foresight and generosity of the Rockefeller family. In view of commercial encroachments upon the natural beauty of the Jersey shore John D. Rockefeller, jr., has for several years directed the acquisition of a great stretch of property adjoining the palisades, and he is now turning it over to the interstate park commission.

It is noteworthy that this $5,000,000 gift to the metropolitan area represents something less than 1 per cent of the vast total of Rockefeller benefactions. The distribution of this family's wealth for purposes of beautification and human welfare are too well known to be recounted, but this latest timely action is particularly commendable, since during this period of restricted income, even among the wealthiest citizens, public gifts have of necessity been greatly reduced.

The land included in the Rockefeller tract varies in width from 250 to 1,000 feet and extends from a point about half a mile south of the George Washington bridge northward 13 miles to the boundary line between New Jersey and New York. It comprises about 40 per cent of the land designed to be included in the park. The commissioners already hold another 40 per cent, so that only 20 per cent remains to be secured. With the acquisition of the Rockefeller gift the work of building the broad driveway along the palisades can proceed by enlisting the aid of a loan of several millions under the Federal Public Works Act.

The wild charge from Cobh to London which Ray Moley didn't make is only equaled by the wild charge of the airplane company for its unused plane.

The departments are willing to put their routine work in urgent emergency class so long as they get their slice of the public works fund.

The deficit is increasing at the rate of $10,000,000 a day, but it doesn't count, being chargeable to the other budget.

Value of Naval Power.

(From the Hartford Courant.)

Recent history demonstrates that naval limitation can be achieved only when the powers maintain the ratios that have been assigned them by international agreement. Limitation was agreed upon at Washington in 1922 because the nations involved possessed the strength that by general consent they were entitled to have. In the succeeding three years, the United States did not maintain its naval forces at the level assigned it by treaty, with the result that, when further limitation was sought at Geneva in 1925, no agreement was possible. Immediately following the breakdown at Geneva, the United States undertook to build up its fleet, with the result that, in 1930, the objective sought at Geneva was readily obtained. With the fleet approaching the strength, in ships, not on paper, that was claimed for it, Great Britain and Japan agreed to what they had previously rejected.

The moral is obvious. The belief that limitation can be achieved by example has no evidence in the history of limitation to support it. On the contrary, much evidence is at hand to demonstrate that limitation can be had if the powers concerned maintain the strength to which they are entitled. Consequently, if the limitation now in force is to be continued, the United States ought to make its fleet match its claims as nearly as possible. Under the best circumstances, limitation will probably be difficult to achieve in 1935, for Japan has already declared its intention to seek a higher ratio than is now assigned it, while, with the naval dispute between Italy and France still unsettled, Great Britain may also seek a higher ratio. For the United States in such circumstances to enter the next conference with as few bargaining points as it carried to Geneva would not only be damaging to its own interests, but might be the cause of a failure to continue limitation in any form.

To build up the Navy is to augment the influence that the United States will have in the conference, and since the record makes plain that its influence will be exerted strongly in behalf of the greatest downward limitation that the other naval powers will consent to, the policy of the administration ought to be supported, not merely by those who believe in strong naval defense, but no less zealously by those who desire the reduction of the instruments of war. As the history of limitation in the last twelve years makes indisputably plain, the policy of the administration is the only policy that yields concrete results for progressive naval disarmament.

Behind in His Work. —Boston Transcript.

Post Haste.

Quiet on the Potomac was somewhat disturbed yesterday by reports from the decoding of Gen. Johnson's remarks on dilatory industrial units.

Chicagoans were polite and no one asked Gen. Balbo why he didn't shave 'em off.

If some form of municipal martial law is necessary to cope with the national disgrace of racketeering and kidnaping, why delay?

If a special session of Congress is required to provide an effective remedy for the crime wave it is not too much to ask that it be called for this exclusive purpose, accenting, of course, exclusive.

The other pupils having no objection, we move that Prof. Moley's written apology for playing hookey and raising cain in London town be accepted.

Comment is still heard on that extremely old-fashioned suggestion from Gov. Ritchie that the way to reduce the expense of governments is to spend less money.

If the Executive Council in one brief session a week can give all the score of men in charge of big things a hearing it will be a useful object lesson for Congress.

Even the London agreements in principle are liable to topple because they are all top-heavy with reservations.

Canada now finds an advantage of 18 per cent in paying interest on American loans; France would be enjoying a 30 per cent discount if she were not enjoying a 100 per cent default.

When a commissioner supplants a commission it means a reduction of personnel unless he needs ten times as many assistants.

The economic conference is preparing to bury its differences and permit personal reputations a long period of recuperation.

That red glow in the west comes from the countenance of former Secretary Hyde. When he asked planters to plow under every third row of cotton for their own benefit he didn't think of also paying them to do it.

Gen. Farley is down South to explain that the party platform on the prohibition standard is not to be considered in the same light as the repeal of gold.

One thing in London that can soon be aired to real advantage will be the assembly rooms of the archeological museum.

The Starlings.

The martins all look down on them and treat them as their foes;
The wrens, I'm sure, consider them
full-cousins to the crows,
And every song bird 'round the place appears to look my way
As if he wonders just how long the starlings are to stay.
I'm told the starling family is a flock of ill-repute
That has a vicious history of stealing farmers' fruit.
They say the starlings all are tough and bully other birds
And in their conversations use a lot of ugly words.
I see them pecking at my lawn with gleaming yellow bills
And wonder just what purpose here
the outlaw starling fills.
The bluebirds live in dread of them and where the starlings stay
The lovely cardinals pack their goods and promptly go away.
The martins look at me as if I'd lost all sense of shame
To lease my grounds to such a crew, as if I were to blame.
The wrens in anger chirp at me; if matters don't improve
And I don't chase the starlings out they'll surely have to move.

Before You Pity the Caged Wolf, Go Pity the Sheep He Killed

By Robert Quillen

IT is almost an impossibility to judge any matter fairly until both sides are heard.

A widow with small children to support has no capital except her home and $5,000 worth of bank stock. The stock brings her an income sufficient to buy bread and butter and she feels secure.

But the bank fails. The stock loses all value. And the law requires the widow, as one of the owners of the bank, to pay another $5,000 to help make up the loss.

When she is unable to find the money, the law takes her home. She is made a pauper and her children are fed by charity.

She says the law is cruel and unjust.

But another widow with small children to support has no capital except $5,000 that represents her husband's life insurance. The money is deposited in the bank. And when the bank closes it is lost.

What does this second widow say of the law?

When the bank's stockholders are assessed 100 per cent and the money thus obtanied is sufficient to repay the depositors only 20 cents on the dollar, she says to her neighbors: "The law is cruel and unjust. Those rich bank owners took $4,000 of my money and the law should force them to make it good if it takes everything they have."

Consider another case.

A man free born and white works with pick and shovel under a blazing July sun. He is clothed in stripes, and a short chain fastened to his ankles reduces his stride to a hobbled shuffle. He sleeps at night in a wheeled cage, where he is chained to twenty fellow prisoners who curse him when he moves.

He is fed cornbread, grease gravy, fat pork, and, at intervals, coffee. The State spends twice as much to feed a mule.

Hard men guard him with loaded guns as he works. When despair and bitterness make him desperate and he refuses to work more, he is locked in stocks or a wooden cell called a sweat box. If he becomes sullen and defiant, he is whipped. And this agony he must endure until he dies.

He says the law is brutal and merciless.

But one summer evening three years ago this man, being drunk as he frequently was, and brutal as always when drunk, entered a neighbor's yard to pick a quarrel. Urged to leave, he drew a gun. In the struggle that followed, one wild shot struck the neighbor's wife, shattering her elbow; a second blinded his 5-year-old daughter; the third and last killed him.

No punishment of the killer can bring the dead back to life or lessen the suffering of the crippled woman or make life endurable for the blind and disfigured child. And brutal punishment, however much deserved, shames the State that permits it.

But prisons and chain gangs are not Sunday schools. Their purpose is to confine and control evil and dangerous men who can not be trusted at large.

If they deal too severely with slight offenders, the fault is not in them but in the law that dooms a trespasser or the decent victim of chance to share the punishment of an inhuman killer.

Political Comment

Antikidnap Technique Needed.

Philadelphia Public Ledger:

It is time for a technique for dealing with kidnaping to be developed.

The best talent among the police all over the country should be put to work on the problem.

They should not allow themselves to be outwitted and outplayed by these gangs of cowards and rats.

The police have failed conspicuously to deal with this situation. Federal authorities operating under the so-called Lindbergh kidnaping law, have fallen far short of what was expected of them. If the police can deal with some measure of success with murder and robbery, they should be able to learn to deal with the worst crime on the calendar.

It is time for them to get busy.

Dream vs. Reality.

Springfield Union.

We do not fear that pending further efforts or later conferences, the European countries would combine against us to our disadvantage. It is doubtful if they could agree to combine on any basis of action between themselves or against us. Each is concerned in its own national policy which in many particulars conflicts with the national policies of other nations. The United States of Europe is a banished dream sometime ago had by the late Aristide Briand. The United States of America is an established and growing reality.

Add Definitions.

Toledo Blade.

Government is an institution that borrows money of the taxpayers to make loans the taxpayers must repay.

Just Women.

Detroit Free Press.

Labor Secretary Frances Perkins, Senator Hattie Caraway, Representatives Florence Kahn, Mary Morton and Virginia Jenckes failed to state their ages in the information prepared for the Congressional Directory. This proves that no matter how eminent they are politically, they are, at heart, just little women, after all.

South Dakota Reasoning.

Wolsey (S. Dak.) Herald.

There is no real economy to saving a dollar in one place and spending $10 additional in another, which is just what the Federal Government is doing. Instead of decreasing taxes, additional taxes are being imposed at a time when the people can least afford to carry the burden. High taxes are stifling all enterprise, which will mean longer depression conditions. The Government can not tax the country out of the depression.

Safeguarding the Big Program.

Kansas City Times.

It is clear that the administration is to take every possible precaution to avoid waste and mismanagement in use of the 3,300-million-dollar public works fund, even to prevent criticism of methods employed in such an outlay. That is the purport of the revamped plans, which place administration of the huge fund directly in the Cabinet, with Secretary Ickes; substitute regional for State administrators, provide a definite engineering check from Washington on all projects advanced and aim to throw still further safeguards about this expenditure of billions of Government money, in reality the people's money.

The Once Over.

UNCLE SAM HAS ANOTHER EXAMINATION.

Dr. Roosevelt—How do you feel now, Sam?

Uncle Sam—Yes and no. I think I'm better but it may be my active imagination.

Dr. Roosevelt—But you're feeling stronger, aren't you?

Uncle Sam—I can't tell for certain whether it's strength or excitement.

Dr. Roosevelt—How's your pulse?

Uncle Sam—It's up more than five points over yesterday's closing.

Dr. Roosevelt—Fine!

Uncle Sam—If I don't speak distinctly you'll have to excuse it.

Dr. Roosevelt—Why?

Uncle Sam—I've got a code in my head.

* * * *

Dr. Roosevelt—Do you sleep well?

Uncle Sam—Sleep well? With the house swarming with all those young doctors, boy specialists and child wonders!

Dr. Roosevelt—Do they keep you awake?

Uncle Sam—I'm getting so much attention that it's become a liability. I wouldn't be at all surprised if I got nursed into a serious setback.

Dr. Roosevelt—Nonsense! You have the largest body of experts attending you ever assembled over one patient.

Uncle Sam (a little sadly)—You're telling me!

* * * *

Dr. Roosevelt—Never before in history have so many specialists been summoned to diagnose and treat one case.

Uncle Sam—They've got me surrounded, Doc. I think if you could get them to move back a little bit I could get a little more fresh air.

Dr. Roosevelt—Never mind about fresh air. You got nothing else but fresh air under the Republicans and look what it did to you!

Uncle Sam—As sick as I was under Dr. Hoover, it seems pretty restful and soothing compared to all this excitement around me now. Are you sure I'm a lot better?

Dr. Roosevelt—You know very well you're better. Your old headache's gone, isn't it?

Uncle Sam—The old one's gone, but I'm afraid there'll be a new one.

Dr. Roosevelt—That's ridiculous. Haven't you heard about my headache control board?

Uncle Sam—No. What is it?

Dr. Roosevelt—I've named a National Board to Control Headache. It will have complete charge of headaches. You can't even get one without a permit.

Uncle Sam—How about that fluttery heart condition that put me in bed all during 1932?

Dr. Roosevelt—Just get it off your mind. Nothing can happen to your heart under the new deal. I've got a board that controls your heartbeat, too.

Uncle Sam—Can't I have any more heart flutters?

Dr. Roosevelt (firmly)—Not without a permit.

Uncle Sam (throwing out his chest)—Well, the way you talk, doctor, makes me feel better anyhow. I guess you know what you're doing.

Dr. Roosevelt (with the old-time smile)—Sam, put all your worries aside and leave everything to us. We're going to make a new man of you if it KILLS YOU!

Letters to the Editor.

Can't Understand Why Government Does Not Follow Its Own Advice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For some time past the Government at Washington, including the previous administration, with a view to assisting recovery, has been advising employers not to reduce salaries or discharge help.

Why is it we do not find the Washington authorities setting an example in this respect? They have not only been reducing their forces and lowering salaries, but prohibiting department heads from filling necessary vacancies.

In this emergency it is quite understandable how the Government, or any organization, must balance its budget and reduce expenditures to meet income, but it is not quite clear why Washington can not see that it would be necessary for any private business to be guided by the same principles. Naturally, if my business will not permit, I am not going to keep two men when my income will only provide for one, nor pay $100 a week when receipts will only permit $50 a week.

Superpermen on Mars Could Tell How to Avoid a Depression.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to a scientist, Mars is inhabited by a superhuman race of beings. What I want to know is whether these superhuman characters have been through a period of financial depression, and if so how they dealt with it. My guess is that they have never heard of a depression, for if they are superhuman they have sense enough not to finance wars. EARTHITE.

Lehman to Call Legislature for Relief Increase

Governor Wants New York City Given Additional Taxing Authority.

Albany, N. Y., July 16 (A.P.).—Gov. Lehman announced today he will call a special session of the Legislature to authorize New York City to levy additional taxes for unemployment relief purposes. He has not yet fixed the date for the session.

He made the announcement in connection with a letter he wrote to the New York City Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which last week petitioned him to summon the Legislature to help the city raise unemployment relief funds.

"It is my intention * * * to recommend to the Legislature that instead of levying special State-wide taxes, it grant to the City of New York authority to levy additional taxes approved by the Legislature, the proceeds of which are to be segregated and earmarked exclusively for home and work relief, and to be effective only to March 1, 1934, at which time the regular Legislature of 1934 will be in session," the governor wrote.

In declining to recommend a State-wide tax, the governor explained that "I am frankly placing the responsibility for the securing of funds directly on the municipality where it belongs."

The governor urged the city to make further reductions in its budget to improve municipal credit. He pointed out that the city has "a large aggregate of floating indebtedness" which must be met within the next few months.

The governor was besieged with requests all summer for a special session to serve various purposes. Among the subjects proposed for emergency legislation have been:

Relief for mortgage-burdened home owners, amendment or suspension of the State's own "anti-trust" law to permit effective operation of the national recovery plan and amendment of the public service law to force utility companies to pay for investigations into their rate structures.

Gandhi Prepares To Be Jailed Again

Bids Friends Good-by as He Awaits Word From Viceroy.

Bombay, July 16 (U.P.).—The Mahatma M. K. Gandhi believed tonight that he would be arrested soon again by British authorities and he asked his wife to prepare his prison kit. He also bade farewell to friends before starting his usual period of Monday silence.

The famous crusader for India's lower classes was certain that the Earl of Willingdon, Viceroy of India, would refuse his request for an interview made yesterday. So far no reply had been received. Gandhi asked for the interview "to explore the possibilities of peace."

Calcutta, India, July 16 (U.P.).—Bengal leaders were understood to be planning secession from the leadership of the Mahatma Gandhi because of his refusal to suspend his civil disobedience campaign.

The leaders met secretly yesterday and were understood to have discussed reorganization of the National India Congress on a federal basis whereby each provincial congress would be autonomous according to regional needs.

Rockefeller Fund Contest Is Started

Mrs. Edith McCormick's Daughter Fights Bank on 8 Million Trust.

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—A contest started by Mrs. Muriel McCormick Hubbard, of Middletown, Conn., over a trust fund valued, at present, at approximately $8,000,000, created by John D. Rockefeller, sr., for her mother, the late Edith Rockefeller McCormick, was disclosed in supreme court today.

Mrs. Hubbard contended that she is entitled to four-sevenths of the principal of the trust fund, while the Chase National Bank, trustee of the fund, held that the terms of the trust agreement provide that the bank continue to hold the principal and pay its income to Mrs. McMormick's children, Mrs. Hubbard, Mrs. Mathilde McCormick Oser, of Switzerland, and Fowler McCormick, of Chicago.

On application of the bank, Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck today granted a motion permitting it to take the testimony of Judge S. Cutting, of Chicago, who drew up Mrs. McCormick's will, before the case reaches trial.

Pumps of Old Washington Watered Romantic Period

Public Gathering Places Witnessed Start of Many Bethrothals.

By John J. Daly.

Oswald Crollius it was in "The Great God Pan"—Arthur Machen's masterpiece—who had that strange saying: "In every grain of wheat there lies hidden the soul of a star."

Of the Southern crop, Robert Harriss paraphrases: "In every boll of cotton there is an evening gown for a fairy."

Bill Carroll, the old Washington detective, who was raised down on Capitol Hill, recalls the original pumps that graced the city and says:

"In the stream of spring water that came up those spouts there was romance."

The romance, of course, was not so much in the water as it was in the gatherers around the pumps—for lads and lassies, in those days, did their courting, some of them, near the old-fashioned pumps of Washington.

They are gone now, nearly all those pumps. As Mr. Carroll, the detective, so aptly phrases it, "They are as scarce as a pope's sermon." And history has it that only once in 300 years has a pope preached a sermon. That was on the occasion, in 1847, when a great crowd had assembled to hear the eloquence of the famous Padre Ventura—in Santa Andrea della Valle, at Rome. The preacher failed to appear. Pius IX ascended the pulpit and gave the sermon.

Public Gathering Places.

To get back to the pumps of Washington: Detective that he is, and native born, Mr. William Carroll claims there are just a few of the old pumps left—and he is right.

Old-timers will never forget the pumps of Washington. They were to Washington what the pump-rooms of other days were to London, and Berlin—public gathering places at mineral springs for the convenience of persons drinking the waters.

The pumps of Washington date back to the early days of the town—shortly after L'Enfant laid it out.

Plenty springs were scattered through the terrain. The Potomac River water was all right for bathing, but not so good for drinking—and over each spring sprang a pump.

When Washington's new filtration plant came into being at the turn of the last century, the pumps began to vanish and in their places came these modern drinking fonts that are quite sanitary in their way, and all that, but not quite so romantic.

As one of the oldest inhabitants, John Brown quaintly puts it, "All the folks went to the pumps for water—the rich folks and the poor folks, the rich folks mostly for drinking water, and the poor folks for drinking and washing water, too."

Democracy at Pumps.

So it was a common sight, on any day in Washington, to see the gentry drive up in their gigs and fill their jugs with water, while the washer-women and the common ordinary populace stood back while waiting to fill the washtubs. Those were what they call the good old days.

It was a democracy, and about the most democratic thing in America was the old-fashioned pump. All the folks drank from the same dipper.

The pumps of Washington were famous as some of the pubs of London.

Each section of the city had its favorite pump. One of the most famous of the pumps stood on New York avenue, near Thirteenth street. That was drawing water literally out of the heart of the city, as it came to be known.

At Fourteenth street and Florida avenue northwest, which is not so far from the heart of the city, there was another pump, and another one out at Twelfth and N streets, and one down at Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

That old pump on the southwest corner of Fourteenth street and Florida avenue northwest stood where a fruit stand now flourishes. The pump was in the back yard of a private residence, but it was considered public property and all the neighborhood came there for water.

Capitol's Most Ornate.

Then, as the piece de resistence of all pumps was the lovely and ornate object that stood on the west front of the United States Capitol. That offered a choice of two waters, with its spigots labeled, Potomac Water, Spring Water.

Well water, naturally, was the toast of the town.

For a good old-fashioned sample of these pumps, the historian need journey no farther than Seventh and H streets southwest, where one of the relics does daily duty.

Bill Carroll, who lived down in the old neighborhood as a boy, recalls the classic pump that stood at the corner of Third and M streets southeast—over on the Navy Yard. Tears come to his eyes as he describes those moonlight evenings when he and the gang met at the pump and sang the old, old songs.

That was even before "Sweet Adeline." Just what songs they sang at a pump the venerable detective can not recall. He claims that the celebrated singing team of O'Connor & Horn—George O'Connor and Matt Horn—who have entertained 12 Presidents, got their start at a pump.

Where Romance Began.

It was along about the dusk of the evening, when the stars came out, that the old pumps began to take on an atmosphere of romance. All during the day they had catered to the thirst of workers—men and women plodding their weary way along, or furnishing water for the suds that would later scrub the old-fashioned shirts.

Came the evening, just after the angelus—for they were ringing bells, too, in Washington then—and the pump forgot all its prosaic work of the day. It began to cater then to love's young dream. The village swain was about to gather.

Mary, and Molly, and Ruth were sent to the pump with pitchers—to get water for mother.

Johnnie and Jim and Lew came over to get a look at the girls.

Love at first sight, and romance began at the pump.

As he sighs, recalling all this, Bill Carroll, the detective, remarks: "Those were the good old days—and nights."

Well, they were. Most of the water, by the bye, came from Carroll Springs—over on Capitol Hill.

Carroll Estate Deadline.

There is a street named Carroll down there, after the celebrated Carroll family that figured so largely in the early history of Washington.

Also, as Mr. Carroll remarks, there was a line near the old Carroll estate over which rival gangs dared not step—under penalty of crossing the Carroll line—which recalled one of the songs they used to sing at the old pumps of Washington, "Caroline—Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline?"

Now all this, of course, is mostly ancient history. So ancient is it that a roving reporter has a mighty difficult time of it finding any one who even wants to recall publicly the pumps of Washington.

Still, there are a few stalwarts who remember.

These unanimously refer to the dippers that were suspended from the pumps.

The dippers—old iron dippers—were hanging on long chains. They were rusty dippers, and it was quite a trick getting a decent drink out of them. So the boys invented the custom of cupping their hands nad getting water in the way that Adam and Eve dipped their refreshment on the banks of a lake in the Garden of Eden.

Colliflower's Memory.

Jim Colliflower, who is young as any of the successful business men in Washington, remembers the old pumps—so they really are not so ancient after all; merely that they did duty a long time.

There was a pump at Seventh and M streets northwest, on what was then called Crow Hill—and a pump down in front of Providence Hospital, and another one on Fourth street southeast, near E, not far from old St. Peter's School, and one out at Thirteenth and N streets, or it might have been Twelfth and N. Wherever oldtimers gather there is always some dispute about the exact location of the pumps. Memory is tricky at best—and only in rare instances can the boys and girls of another day remember the exact location of their favorite pump. It shows, of course, that pumps did not make quite so much impression as other adornments.

Now the pumps are gone—all but a few; the old-fashioned pumps of Washington. Around the remaining few is a sort of halo.

Some one suggests the Government should put one of the old-fashioned pumps in the Smithsonian Institute—for old time's sake.

Hungary Orders Loans Paid in Own Currency

Budapest, Hungary, July 16 (U.P.).—The government decreed today that henceforth all payments on dollar mortgage loans shall be paid in Hungarian currency. It will go into the government transfer fund at the current rate of exchange quoted by the National Bank of Budapest, not on a basis of gold dollar parity as heretofore.

Farm Session Will Seek Plan To Lower Yield

Delegates From 10 States to Meet at Des Moines to Decide Policy.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 16 (A.P.). An attempt to lessen the flow of golden corn and fattened hogs from the Midwestern horn of plenty is to be made here Tuesday.

Representatives of farm groups of ten States are to assemble here to discuss plans to bring prices of these corn belt commodities up to prewar levels.

Their decisions are to receive attention at the national conference of producers, packers and farm administrators in Chicago.

The seventy-six delegates are looking into the future to decide their attitude on pork processing taxes and production control of corn. They have been told that packers have intimated their opposition to a processing tax, preferring trade agreements.

Favor Cutting Production.

Iowa representatives have decided that reduction of corn and hog production is necessary for stabilized price recovery. To this idea, many delegates from other States agree, according to recent meetings.

The Hawkeye group, however, agrees with the packers that trade agreements are essential for immediate boosting of hog quotations. Illinois conferees are known to favor export trade and emphasis on trade agreements.

From other States opinions vary. Nebraska agrees on hogs but not on corn reduction; Minnesota and Wisconsin insists that land taken out of corn production be used only for soiling crops.

Policy to Be Decided.

Kansas spokesmen approve of reduction on the two subjects of the conference, provided that the reduction plan is applied to other commodities if needed. Indiana will follow Iowa.

The stands of the delegations from South Dakota, Ohio and Missouri have not been clearly specified.

As the discussion goes on and voting begins, ballots will be cast on a basis of proportionate production of corn and hogs by respective States.

Russian Plowings Reported as High

Peasants Carry Out Program of Spring to Insure Good Harvest.

Moscow, July 16 (U.P.).—The Soviet government today reported 98 per cent fulfilment of its spring plowing program, attributing the slight underfulfilment to failure of individual peasants.

The Kolkhozes carried out their program 102 per cent and the Sovkhozes 109 per cent, according to the report, which was featured in the press here under prominent headlines.

Newspapers commented editorially that success of the program was due to organization and timely preparations, warning, however, that efforts should not be slackened, but rather speeded to insure an excellent harvest.

Police Shift Prisoner On Gangland Tip

Sammons, Taken From Train, Reported 'Wanted' by Rival Gangs.

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—An underworld tip that James (Fur) Sammons, notorious gangster, would be welcomed back to Chicago by rival gangs—one with intent to kill him and the other with intent of shooting his police guard to free him—led authorities today to remove him from a train at Joliet and speed Sammons by automobile to detective headquarters.

Sammons was being returned to Chicago by four policemen attached to the Cook County State's attorney's office after he waived extradition from Kansas City. He was wanted on a 7-year-old charge of participating in the $80,000 holdup of the International Harvester Co.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert telegraphed the police escort to leave the train at Joliet. Three detective squad cars met the train and guarded Sammons during a speedy dash to the detective bureau.

The gang purportedly seeking to rescue Sammons was to have been headed by "Three-Fingered" Jack White and "Klondike" O'Donnell, the captain said. The other gang was said to have included some gunmen who feared that Sammons would believe they had something to do with the tip that resulted in his arrest by Kansas City police.

Sammons was paraded at the show-up today.

Farm Mortgages To Be Refinanced

Henry Morgenthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, who has supervision over the Federal Land Banks through which the plans are handled, will leave Washington July 24 to visit States where the program is being used.

Austria Opposes Monarchist Group

Vienna, July 16 (A.P.).—In a speech at Altheim today, Vice Chancellor Winkler warned that the determined fight of the regime of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss against Hitlerism does not mean that this is leading toward restoration of the Hapsburgs (the last reigning monarchs in Austria).

"We oppose with equal determination the activities of the legitimist reaction because the final result of such activities would be economic and national catastrophe," Winkler declared.

The National Socialists, or Nazis, followers of the tenets of Chancellor Adolph Hitler of Germany, were barred recently as a party in Austria by governmental decree.

Ashcom, until it was bought in 1818 by the late Dr. William Thomas and remained in the Thomas family until Maj. Davidson bought it from Miss Kit Thomas. The Davidsons have restored Cremona to its former Colonial glory and added a flying field. One of its interesting features is its hanging stairway, a duplicate of the one in the Jefferson mansion in Richmond, Va.,

Reach for a Lucky for always Luckies Please!

Copyright, 1933, The American Tobacco Company.

I learned about "Toasting" from my husband

I used to think that "Toasting" was just an advertising phrase. But one day my husband explained to me what "Toasting" is—and what it does. Where he learned it all, I don't know, but I began to understand the difference in cigarettes. Now I find myself enjoying Luckies' mildness and fine taste with a new respect. But even more—since I am a woman quite sensitive to personal daintiness—and since my cigarette and my lips are so intimately related, I especially appreciate the comforting purity of "Toasting". Naturally, with me it's always "Luckies Please!"

because "It's toasted"

Summer Time Garden Needs Special Care

Insects Threaten Plants When Gardeners Relax Their Vigilance.

By the Meanderer.

Whether you reap what you have sown depends on the care you give your garden during July and August. The Meanderer called at a downtown nursery and implement store to learn the reason why. Big bugs, little bugs, all kinds of bugs, creep forth from their nooks and corners during the extreme heat. Seized with the spirit of vandalism, some of them burrow into the ground and attack the roots of plants. Others, entertaining loftier sentiments, climb the delicate stems and wantonly feed on leaves and blossoms. All this, unless the gardener stays right there on the job.

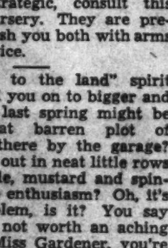
Could you bear to watch the flowers you have fostered droop dejectedly with no helping hand to save them from the onslaught of the beetles? Would you stand by and see these helpless beauties subjected to the ravages of slugworms? Don your fighting clothes! Take your trusty sprayer in hand and fling yourself with might and main upon these ruinous pests. If you would be strategic, consult this downtown nursery. They are prepared to furnish you both with arms and good advice.

That "back to the land" spirit which spurred you on to bigger and better things last spring might be recalled. That barren plot of ground over there by the garage? Picture it laid out in neat little rows of turnips, kale, mustard and spinach. What, no enthusiasm? Oh, it's the seed problem, is it? You say your garden's not worth an aching back? Why, Miss Gardener, you're medieval! Every modern planter owns a seeder. By this accurate mechanical means you're assured of straight furrows and quick results.

Label this "It might be a good idea." Amateur planters interested in a list of suggestions for the care and culture of the garden during July write in to the Meanderer. Be sure to enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

A "shining" example of what's good in cocktail tables is the chromium and enamel model seen by the Meanderer in an F street shop. It opens to serve one purpose, and folds to serve another. Take your choice. Use it when the need demands or tuck it way when you want the space. Moral: Even furniture should be adaptable. Price, $7.50.

White oak from Kansas has come to Washington in the guise of a beer set. Whether you buy it or not depends largely on whether you want something ultra ultra along this line. Having looked far and seen many, the Meanderer concludes that here for $25 is something worth buying. There are six mugs, and each mug holds one bottle of beer. The large pitcher has a capacity for many more. A pretzel bucket guarantee to hold all that the guests can eat, and a large tray says you've nothing on me. In this group the barrel does noble work in setting the pace for summer thirst relief. Mugs, pitcher, bucket are finished copies, with staves, hoops and all.



If the Meanderer said she saw a knitted suit, the very thing for summer wear, the chances are you'd laugh. But if she adds that this suit is linen knit she may gain your ear. Well, shoppers, linen knit it is, and planned especially for the present season in Washington. The plain snug-fitting skirt leads the eye to the short blouse, which fastens up the front with large buttons, and ties around the neck with a draw string. The waist is gathered in with a cord of the same material.

Befeathered mules are up for sale! Pink ones or blue ones, just as you please. In an F street store for $1.95. These dainty bedroom slippers are never amiss for a surprise package. Neither are the handy mesh shorts shown at the same shop. If you're looking for the ideal sports lingerie, here it is.

The last of the summer shoes are walking away with shoppers. Here's a time it pays to be swept off one's feet, or rather here's a good time to pay for the privilege. Drastic reductions in summer footwear have brought the smartest models within reach of all pocketbooks. An F street shop is showing chic white sponge leather semisport ties in either flat or continental heels for $5.85; strictly sport ghillie ties in white pigskin for $5.85, and a sandal pump in kid and linen, $7.85. The Meanderer suggests buying now while the buying is good.

Telephone questions on The Meanderer's column in The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 27, or address The Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Smart Beach Costume Has Flannel Trousers

The smartest of beach costumes this summer have a good deal of blue and white about them. Fay Wray, motion picture actress, chooses a modish outfit in this color combination.

The trousers are of white flannel. The crisp cotton blouse carries out the trim tailored effect. Her pursuers' jacket is of fine blue whip cord with short sleeves.

Modified Picnic Offers Advantages Over Real Thing

Safety and convenience are two of the important features of the home picnic. These youngsters have a happy time as they take part in community experiment in which each mother in the neighborhood cares for all the children one day a week. It works out well, and makes for adaptability and social adjustment.

A Backyard Fireplace for the Youngest Ones Saves Mother Time and Energy; Gives Children Many Happy, Healthy Hours.

If you have ever tried taking the littlest children on a picnic you are doubtless among those who have vowed "never again." The idea of the picnic sounds fine. No dishes, no tableware, everybody happy out of doors in the sunshine. But picnics necessitate preparations for a trip, however short, including dressing the children and packing the lunch. Except in parks and tourist camps, picnic spots don't provide level places to sit, to eat from, or to set drinking cups on. Little children are used to these conveniences at their home meals and do not always adapt themselves readily to new ways of managing their food.

One wise couple decided that with modifications picnics were possible and good for the children. In the first place they eliminated the long trip to some distant spot. They planned picnics right at home in the back yard. Then they cut down most of the preparation—in fact, soon managed with far less of it than for an indoor meal. They let the children eat in their sun-suits, at their own little table, brought out from the nursery. Most of the foods they were accustomed to for lunch inside could be brought out to the yard.

But the biggest joy of all was the fireplace they built out of field stone, so that parts of some of the meals could be cooked right out of doors, and the children could help. The fireplace was built with a high rampart for safety on the three sides, and a bench where those interested could watch the progress of the bacon or the kabobs or whatever was being toasted on the end of the long forks. Potatoes could be baked right in the fire itself.

The mother in the picture, taken by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in Massachusetts, is one of a group interested in child study. These mothers care for each other's children on different days of the week on a cooperative plan, and meet with the extension agent for suggestions and study. Needless to say, the children love to come to the home that has the backyard fireplace, and it has been copied by several parents in the community.

Shoes, Purses and Belts Made of Wood

The pink-cheeked Holland maid isn't the only one these days who wears wooden shoes. The stylists have clad madame in a fashion to make a dryad jealous. Delicate woods are used to make her slippers, her hats, her belts and her buttons.

Bags of bird's-eye maple are lined with brown-and-yellow checked gingham, and clasped sometimes with woden blocks, sometimes with carved wooden spirals. The material is washable, waterproof, and as light as a feather. Wooden bracelets are so highly polished that they look as though they came from the back of a tortoise instead of the heart of a tree. Flexwood hats are draped to fit the head; vanity cases with inlaid centers are appearing.

Wooden buttons are no new thing. These were introduced from Germany two generations ago. Jewelry of this material has been in vogue for some time, but after the latest innovations we soon expect the fashion authorities to clothe us in Tapa cloth, like the South Sea belles.

Swagger Cut in Dressy Pelts Decreed As Newest Fur Coat Fashion for Fall

By Amos Parrish.

If you can like a fur coat when you try it on in dripping midsummer weather, chances are good you'll like it even more when wearing time arrives. (Like the renting-a-house-on-a-rainy-day test.) And that's good enough excuse for many women to buy a fur coat now. Not to mention the moderate sums that will still buy many of them now.

Eyes looking for something new are caught by the dressy swagger fur coat. Not a sports swagger, although the box-like, loose-hanging lines started out in sports coats. But swaggers made of dressy furs such as Hudson seal and caracul.

It's one of those radical ideas which are eminently practical. The lines are casual and informal. The furs rather formal. Result: a coat which can be worn many kinds of places. To sports events and informalities and on plain every day occasions without looking overdressed. And to teas and dinners without looking underdressed.

Longer Than Sports.

These dressy swaggers allow just a few inches of your dress to show, as in the picture. Longer, you see, than the new sports swagger which is nearer knee length.

They have warm scarf collars to tie up close or let fly. Or snug small round ones or upstanding military collars. You'll like their easy air and find them youthful looking and flattering.

The general wear fur coat for the conservatives, however, has more figure-fitting lines. The waist is shaped in, though not so much as last winter's.

Sleeves look new. Some have draped fullness from shoulder to elbow. Some have fullness pleated into shoulder seams or into a yoke. Generally the lower part is fitted close to the arm.

While the shawl collar is a general favorite, there are ascot scarf collars, cape-like collars and small standing or bell-shaped collars combined with yokes.

Widened shoulders are a feature and many are high as well. Extensions up and out at the shoulder seams, epaulettes, yokes are used in varying ways.

This year the fashionable furs for this useful coat are Hudson, caracul, Persian and mink. And a few of the most fashionable women are choosing Alaska seal.

Care of Furs.

Any fur coat represents an investment worth guarding well. And we can help you guard yours and perhaps make it wear longer with our instructive leaflet on the care of furs. If you'll mail the filled-in coupon and stamped self-addressed return envelope we'll send it to you. Amos Parrish.

Women Insist Inequalities Be Abolished

Federation Convention to Voice Appeal for Economic Rights.

The vanguard of the delegates for the meeting of the board of directors of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, scheduled for Chautauqua, N. Y., July 24-28, has arrived in the United States. It includes Dr. Marie Munk, of Germany, the first woman to practice law in Berlin and also the first to become a civil judge in Prussia, and Mrs. Cecilia Hasselstrom, leading Helsingafors journalist, one of the founders of the Finnish Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Dr. Alexandrescu to Attend.

Dr. Wally Alexandrescu, general secretary of the newly organized Roumanian Federation, will arrive shortly to represent Roumania. Giovanna Dompe, professor of the history of art and costume in the normal schools of Rome, will be the official representativae of the National Federation of Italy, and it is anticipated that Senora Inez E. Munoz will come as a representative of the newly organized Spanish branch of the federation. Others from abroad whose presence will lend interest to the sessions are Dame Rachel Crowdy, former chief of the social questions and opium traffic section of the League of Nations; Dr. Marianne Beth, of Vienna, vice president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, first woman to study theology at the University of Vienna and first woman to become a doctor of laws in Austria; Mrs. Cora Zachrisson de Chevalier, of Panama; Dr. Christine Galitzi, of Roumania; Countess di Carpenetto, of Italy, and Mrs. Anna Rumanis, of Latvia.

Discriminations against women, both married and single, during the economic crisis, will be one of the principal topics of discussion. There will be informal reports from many countries as to the extent to which discriminations prevail in each, with a view to formulating suggestions as to a uniform method of combating the tendency.

Consider Hague Opinion.

Another important subject of discussion will be the advisory opinion rendered by the Hague Court in 1932 upon the draft convention adopted in 1919 by the International Labor Conference, which provides that "women without distinction of age shall not be employed during the night in any public or private industrial undertaking or in any branch thereof, other than an undertaking in which only members of the same family are employed." The decision of the court, by a vote six to five, that the convention applies to women who hold positions of supervision or management and are not ordinarily engaged in manual work, appears to threaten the position of executives and trained technicians in many vocations and is therefore of grave concern to business and professional women.

Of equal concern to them is the draft convention of the conference dealing with the abolition of fee-charging employment agencies, which while it recommends that such agencies be done away with does not definitely provide for the establishment of public agencies, or for the continuance of private agencies operated on a nonprofit basis by international organizations.

Lena Phillips to Preside.

Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, of New York City, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, will preside over the sessions of the board. Representatives from this country and Canada who will attend include Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, Va., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Miss A. Josephine Dauphinee, president of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women; Miss Henrietta C. Harris, of Springfield, Mass., treasurer of the International Federation; Miss Mary C. Kennedy, of Lafayette, Ind., finance chairman; Miss Helen Havener, New York City, publicity chairman; Miss Marjory Lacey Baker, New York City, member of the cooperating council, and Mrs. Zetta B. Averill, of Aberdeen, Wash., member of the finance committee.

Miss Dorothy A. Heneker, executive director of the International Federation, will come from Geneva to attend.

Criminals Beware!

Pickpockets, sneak thieves and safe crackers tread softly in Windsor, Ontario, when this pretty sleuth is on the job. Bessie Wilkinson, 18-year-old daughter of Supt. James Wilkinson of the Windsor police department, substitutes for her father while he's on vacation.

Culbertson's Bridge

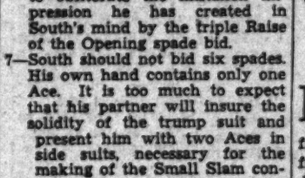
Don't Shout.

MR. DANIEL STEINBERG, of Brooklyn, New York, recently submitted to me a hand which occurred at one of the weekly sessions of his Bridge Club, and asked me to comment on the bidding and play. The hand in question is an excellent example of the advantages of proceeding slowly and cautiously, rather than rushing into what may be an unmakable contract because one partner fears that the other will be unable to hear him if he speaks in a low tone rather than shouting at the top of his voice. In Bridge most correct contracts are reached by the exact exchange of inferences between the partners with neither overbidding nor underbidding interfering with the accurate drawing of inferences. Mr. Steinberg's hand, which brought about the defeat of the partnership by 1 trick, was the following:

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The actual bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
		Pass	Pass
1♠(1)	2♣(2)	4♠(3)	Pass
Pass	5♣(4)	Pass	Pass
Dbl.(5)	Pass	5♠(6)	Pass
6♠(7)	Dbl.(8)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A sound Opening bid.
2—The Overcall is justified not only by the possession of 2½ honor-tricks, but by the strong distributional values of the hand.
3—North should not jump to game. Three spades is a sufficient indication of the strong support for partner's bid suit, and certainly assures that South will bid again if game is possible as, indeed, it must be if South's Opening bid is sound.
4—A daring bid, but actually, as the cards lie, a very light sacrifice to prevent non-vulnerable opponents from making a game.
5—South has no other course. His hand suggests that five spades can not be made.
6—North rightly bids five spades. However, it is impossible for him to obliterate the mistaken impression he has created in South's mind by the triple Raise of the Opening spade bid.
7—South should not bid six spades. His own hand contains only one Ace. It is too much to expect that his partner will insure the solidity of the trump suit and present him with two Aces in side suits, necessary for the making of the Small Slam contract.
8—An unsound Double, as the most that West can hope for is the defeat of the contract by 1 trick.

It is, of course, obvious that in the play South had to lose one club and one heart trick. As a matter of fact, East and West, by careful play, could have defeated the contract 2 tricks, but West, against the Slam, elected to open the Ace of hearts and followed with the King of clubs, and thus South did not lose a diamond trick.

To answer Mr. Steinberg's question as to the correct bidding, in my judgment the final contract should have been five spades, and the bidding should have been as follows:

South	West	North	East
		Pass	Pass
4♠

Whether or not West should bid five clubs at this point is questionable, but if he does so, then North should either pass or bid five spades, but if South doubles five clubs, North, with his unbalanced hand, which indicates that there may not be possibility of even a single trick in spades against the club contract, should bid five spades. North's bid of five spades, as it occurred in the actual bidding, however, should not have been construed by South as a Slam try, however mild, as, if North were interested in Slams, he had available, during the course of the bidding, other and better bids to show the possession of the stuff that Slams are made of—namely, favorable distribution and control of the first round of at least three suits.

To sum up, then, North erred in his first bid of four spades; South erred in bidding six spades. Inasmuch as the bidding of West is not in question, there is no point in passing upon it. Certainly his bid of five clubs, vulnerable, while it had a happy result, was dangerous in the extreme.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If North and South have reached a contract of six spades, what should you, holding the East hand below, do, and what is West's correct Opening lead if East has overcalled two clubs with two notrump?

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable; part-score 60.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Cave Man Slept In Shallow Pit

Last night you stretched your tired limbs on your comfortable bed, and slept the sleep of the untroubled. The quality of your sleep was due largely to the excellent construction of your mattress and bed springs. The comfort you enjoyed was the result of centuries of development from a crude beginning.

The Neanderthal Man stretched his tired limbs upon the ground. During the night his half-clad body was exposed to all the winds of heaven, and besieged by creeping insects. Slow to learn, it took him a long time to discover that he could sleep more warmly in a shallow pit. When he did discover this, he dug his own bed to fit his individual measurements.

A couple of generations later he conceived the idea of lining the pit with leaves or fur. With his fur blanket he was then well protected from the elements. This arrangement was very satisfactory for cold weather, but during the summer months our ancestor was less comfortable inside the ground than out. Besides, the aforesaid insects were troublesome in hot weather.

It was probably on the banks of the Nile that the primitive man first wove his rush mat, and, to allow freer circulation of air, laid it on a low framework. The popular enthusiam was so great that the bed soared higher and higher, until steps were neded to reach it. Beds like this are still used, even after so long a time.

Beds became a symbol of luxury and high position. Kings of Egypt received homage in a reclining position; the Romans used beds instead of dining-room chairs; the baron had his bed, the slave the floor. Throughout the ages man has spent much time and effort improving his sleeping arrangements. Witness the ornate carvings, smothering canopies and various additions that have appeared in every era.

Today beds are built for comfort, and modeled with simplicity. The night is for sleep as it was for the Neanderthal, but we sleep more soundly than he and have fewer reasons for nightmares.

Salad Dressing.

(Excellent for summer use.)

4 egg yolks
4 tablespoons flour
1-3 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon celery salt
½ cup vinegar
2-3 cup water

Beat yolks and add dry ingredients. Add rest of ingredients, mixing well. Cook in double boiler until dressing becomes thick and creamy. Stir frequently. Pour into jar which has been rinsed out with cold water. Cool. Cover and store in the ice box.

What Today Means

By Mary Blake.

"Cancer."

IF JULY 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:25 a. m. to 9:55 a. m., from 4:40 p. m. to 5:40 p. m. and from 6:55 p. m. to 8:10 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11:40 a. m. and from 8:20 p. m. to 9:35 p. m.

Influences operating on this day will be conducive to research; hidden facts will come to light, seemingly of their own accord, and much progress should be made. Those practicing deception of any sort will find it difficult to get away with on this date. You should be able to tell just how and where you stand in another's estimation on this date; expect great frankness between friends.

The child born on this July 17 will, in all probability, be an extremely "touchy" little one; one will never know just how to treat him and he will be unappreciative of what is done for him. Do not expect to have this child give you his confidence; he will be much more inclined to trust strangers than those of his immediate family.

If July 17 is the date of your birth, you are perhaps a person who has not a great deal of "gumption." You will never find a place at the head of the line, and unless you develop initiative and firmness, you will let the rest of the world push you to one side and down to the end of the line. Yours is a sweet nature and your thoughts of others are always kind and never condemnatory. It is part of your make-up to be lacking in enthusiasm; it is difficult for you to rouse yourself to a keen appreciation of anything. You are perhaps too much inclined to ponder the "whys" and "wherefores" of life, and then finding no suitable answer to say, "Oh, what's the use?" You must learn the value of activity properly directed.

Born on July 17, there is a certain fineness about you that cries out for development. You have artistic possibilities, and if you work at it, you can no doubt write with more than average success. You seem always to see only the fine qualities in others, and if you felt inspired to devote your life to your church, you could have great effect in bringing many to follow in right paths. Find an interest in something and you will succeed at it. You may feel opposed to early marriages, but the chances are that you will marry young.

Sunday Night Supper Needs Menu Variety

Eggs Prepared as Special Dishes Offer Tasty Original Fare.

While every housekeeper realizes full well the value and necessity of eggs as a requisite for cooking, it is surprising how few think of them as a special dish for luncheon or dinner. Eggs are all very well for breakfast, and it's true we have them occasionally in an omelet for other meals, but little or no attention has been paid to the innumerable other ways in which they can be prepared.

Now, of all seasons in the year, is certainly the time to use eggs, for the markets are offering them at a price which will not go much lower. They are perfect on summer days as a meat substitute and smart hostesses are using them more and more as an entree or separate course, particularly for hot suppers on Sunday nights.

One well-known Washington matron makes a specialty of starting her Sunday night suppers with baked eggs in tomato sauce. This takes the place of an appetizer or soup and is followed by cold meats and a salad, often of cold asparagus with vinegar dressing. Crackers with melted cheese over them should go with this course, and for dessert have sliced fruits or melon.

The recipe for the baked eggs which can be baked either in individual dishes as described here or in a casserole, follows:

Baked Eggs in Tomato Sauce.

1 cup tomato sauce.
1 cup finely rolled flake soda crackers.
6 eggs.
Salt and pepper.
2 tablespoons grated American cheese.

Butter individual baking dishes and place two tablespoons of tomato sauce in each. Add a layer of crumbled crackers. Break an egg in each dish, season, add a layer of crumbled crackers and more tomato sauce. Sprinkle with grated cheese and bake in a very hot oven (500 degrees farenheit) 10 minutes. Serve hot. 6 portions.

You will find eggs lucca perfect for your dinner time entree. Creamed carrots or new potatoes will go well with them and for your first course have a clear soup either hot or jellied. The egg recipe is a new one and is sure to be a favorite. Here it is:

Eggs Lucca.

6 hard boiled eggs.
¼ cup minced mushrooms.
2 tablespoons butter.
½ teaspoon minced onion.
Salt and pepper.
2 cups scalded milk.
½ cup finely rolled flake butter crackers.
2 tablespoons minced pimento.
¼ cup grated American cheese.

Shell and halve eggs. Light fry mushrooms in butter. Combine mashed egg yolks with mushrooms and onion and season. Refill egg whites with this mixture. Place prepared eggs in buttered baking dish. Pour hot milk over finely rolled crackers. Beat until smooth and creamy and add pimiento. Season to taste and pour over eggs. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake in a hot oven (475 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Six portions.

Creole eggs should finish off your selection of egg recipes and give you a variety that will keep your family both surprised and pleased.

Creole Eggs.

3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced onion
3 tablespoons minced green pepper
1½ cups stewed tomatoes, salt and pepper
6 eggs
1 tablespoon water
6 Holland rusk
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

In two tablespoons hot melted butter, lightly brown onion and green pepper. Add tomatoes. Season and simmer for 5 minutes. Cook eggs, covered, in remaining butter combined with one tablespoon hot water. Place one egg on each rusk, cover with hot mixture and sprinkle with parsley. Six portions.

Smart Accessories Have Ranch Origin

Zane Grey is coming into his own, and we see "dude-rancheresses" strolling down Fifth avenue. French coutouriers are responsible for this, as they are for many interesting novelties.

Picture for yourself the cowboy's red jersey and add to this a leather belt studded with nails. Before your imagination becomes too overtaxed, visualize a pointed sombrero and a red bolero. A bandana handkerchief loosely knotted around a sun-tanned throat will help to make the picture complete.

Filipinos Rally 60,000 Strong For Freedom

Demonstrators, on Eve of Legislature's Opening, Ask to Vote.

Manila, P. I., July 16 (A.P.).—On the eve of the opening tomorrow of the annual hundred day session of the Insular Legislature advocates of Philippine independence paraded tonight and then rallied at an open air meeting.

The demonstrators adopted a memorial urging that a plebiscite be held on the question of adoption or rejection of the Hawes-Cutting Independence Act, passed by the United States Congress over the veto of former President Hoover.

Police estimated the crowd at about 60,000.

Opponents to Rally.

Opponents of the independence act plan a demonstration after the preliminary session opens at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Manuel Roxas, speaker of the House of Representatives, and Sergio Osmena, president pro tem of the Senate, conferred at length today with Manuel Quezon, president of the Senate.

After the conference it was widely reported that Quezon, opponent of the independence measure, was satisfied and had decided not to press his recently announced move to oust Roxan and Osmena, who have supported the act, from their legislative posts.

Agrees to Popular Vote.

Osmena, at the acceptance rally tonight, said that Quezon, whose supporters claimed a clear majority in the Senate and House, pledged himself weeks ago as agreeing to permit a popular vote on the independence measure.

Quezon has based his chief opposition to the Hawes-Cutting act on provisions which would retain exports to the United States during a ten-year transition period that would precede complete independence.

The first order of business at tomorrow's opening session will be the message of Governor General Frank Murphy. Legislative leaders said they expected both houses would recess until Wednesday after receiving the message. The executive committee of the Nationalist party will meet Tuesday.

Industrialists End 4-Day Conference

National Recovery Plans Studied as 150 Meet at Sessions.

Blue Ridge, N. C., July 16 (A.P.).—The fourteenth annual Southern conference of human relations in industry ended here today after a four-day study of the national industrial recovery act. Nearly 150 industrial workers and executives from Southeastern States attended.

A note of optimism was sounded by one of the final speakers, Dr. Samuel W. Grafflin, New York lecturer and writer, who expressed faith "in the enduring firmness of the principles of honesty, fair play and consideration for others."

The conference was told a new type of executive must be developed to meet conditions which the "new deal" imposes upon business management, by Harry N. Clarke, of Cleveland, Ohio, counselor on industrial morale.

Historian Reveals Lincoln Mustered in Four Times

Former Representative Cyrenus Cole, of Iowa, Claims New Facts Abont Emancipator Disclosed in Study of Early Records of War Department.

By Harris Hull.

Is there anything about Abraham Lincoln that has not been told?

Former Representative Cyrenus Cole, of Iowa, veteran legislator and member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, who retired voluntarily from Congress last March, thinks he has found something about the Great Emancipator that has escaped the historians and biographers.

Cyrenus Cole.

Mr. Cole's historical discovery is in the form of a fourth muster role of the Black Hawk War. Lincoln is credited with three enlistments in that war, but while delving into the papers locked up in the War Department Mr. Cole found another enlistment.

A newspaper man by profession, Mr. Cole has spent his spare time in historical research. He is the author of "A History of the People of Iowa," and has written extensively on the Indian history of the Mississippi Valley, on which subject he is a recognized authority.

"I have remained in Washington," he said yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel, where he makes his Washington home, "to do something for an Indian, and that Indian is Black Hawk, the most dramatic and glamorous fighter in the upper Mississippi country. At a time when biographies occupy the literary stage, the story of an American Indian who played a part that made him a national theme, ought not to be amiss, and more worthwhile than some of the decayed personalities that have been resurrected out of European cemeteries."

Filled With Heroes.

Mr. Cole called attention to the fact that the Lincoln was not the only great American who took part in the Black Hawk War.

"The roster of that war," said Mr. Cole, "literally glows with great names. President Andrew Jackson, who made his fame as an Indian fighter, summoned Black Hawk to the White House, and learned to admire him. Gen. Winfield Scott was the final commander in the war. Zachary Taylor, who became President, served as a colonel of the regulars. Jefferson Davis, the future President of the Confederate States, was a lieutenant and had charge of Black Hawk as a prisoner of war. Albert Sidney Johnson, one of the greatest of the Confederate generals; Robert Anderson, of Fort Sumter fame, and Phil Kearney and William S. Harney, all great American soldiers in later wars, all did service in the colorful little war that the Indian Black Hawk made."

Mr. Cole believes that the Black Hawk War is one of the most picturesque and significant episodes in the making of America. The founding of Chicago followed in its wake and the development of Illinois and the opening of Wisconsin and Iowa were made possible through the results of that war.

In regard to the Lincoln muster roll Mr. Cole had this to say:

"Lincoln served in three companies. He was one of the volunteers from New Salem, Ill., where he was then living. He was only 23 years of age. His wrestling bouts and story-telling proclivities had given him enough local fame to be elected captain of the company of 70 mounted men. He said afterward that he enlisted through no particular feelings of patriotism, but that at that time he had nothing else to do. When this company was mustered out, he reenlisted as a private in the company of Capt. Elijah Iles, and later as a private in the company of Jacob M. Early, which was a scouting company. In all three he served less than four months.

Explains Surprise.

"In delving into the files of the War Department, I found the surprise of a fourth muster roll on which Lincoln's name appears. The company was under Capt. Alexander White. It was mustered in on May 26, 1832, and mustered out on June 15 following. On this the name appears as 'Abraham Lincoln.' On the others it is simply 'A. Lincoln.' The volunteers furnished their own equipment. Lincoln stands credited with $30 for arms and equipment and $70 for a 'brown horse.' But Lincoln can not have served long in this company, for from May 27 to June 16 he was with Capt. Iles' company. The explanation probably is that he enlisted in White's company on June 26 and on the following day was transferred to Iles' company, without his name being erased from White's company roster."

Mr. Cole brought out that the Black Hawk War was the political stock in trade of office seekers for a whole generation. In its magic name those who served in it were elected to offices from United States senators down to constables of townships. "The politicians had all fought, bled and almost died in that war," the historian stated.

"Lincoln, who attained the highest office, never made capital out of his services. On the contrary, he was more in the habit of belittling what he did for his country when he fought against Black Hawk. When he was a member of Congress in 1848, and Zachary Taylor and Lewis Cass were contending for the Presidency, he made a somewhat famous, or, at least, characteristic speech on the subject. His supporters were posing Cass as a hero of the War of 1812, in which Black Hawk as well as Tecumseh wore the red coats of British officers."

"Lincoln in his speech ridiculed this heroic talk. He made the House laugh by referring to himself in a mock manner as a 'military hero.' He said if he was ever faint from the loss of blood, as Cass posed, it was due to mosquitoes and not to Indians.

War Record Advantage.

"But Lincoln in that speech may have underestimated the influence of the Black Hawk war on himself. He must have come out of it with a great deal of knowledge about volunteer soldiers, knowledge that stood him in good stead when he became commander in chief of the great volunteer armies of the Civil War. The fact that he often knew more than his generals about such matters may be due to his own experience in the Black Hawk war. That experience must be considered in any study of what have been called his 'prairie years.'"

Mr. Cole is taking his Black Hawk manuscript back to Iowa with him. An historian who covers his subject with great brevity, he will write the entire history in one volume of about 300 pages.

Before putting the final touches on the story he expects to revisit many of the historic scenes of the war, down the Iowa River and up the Mississippi and the Rock Rivers, and thence back across the Wisconsin to the Mississippi, on the banks of which the final tragedy of extermination was enacted.

"It's all historic ground," said Mr. Cole, "and the glamour of Black Hawk's patriotic struggle to hold the lands of his ancestors lingers still and will linger forever."

Untermyer Acts To Lead Boycott On Nazi Goods

American Calls Parley to Meet Next Thursday in Amsterdam.

London, July 16 (A.P.).—A meeting of 30 representatives of principal countries has been convoked by Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, with a view to extending a boycott against German goods, and an appeal to the League of Nations against alleged anti-Jewish atrocities in Nazi Germany.

The meeting will be held at Amsterdam next Thursday or Friday.

Untermyer, explaining the conference and its purposes today, said that a boycott already was well under way in many countries, but that its effects had been cushioned by a decision to allow stores to use up German stocks already on hand.

With exhaustion of these stocks, he said, German manufacturers will begin to feel the full force of worldwide sentiment against repression of the Jews

The appeal to the League of Nations probably will be based on two counts—violation of the labor clauses of the treaty of Versailles in excluding Jews from German labor unions and persecution of the Jews as a minority people.

Untermyer said he was working in collaboration with the British Jewish committee, headed by Lord Melchett, but he expressed the hope the Amsterdam meeting would arrange to carry the boycott movement much further than the British group heretofore has been willing to go.

Untermyer, who came here with his nephew, Laurence A. Steinhardt, New United States Minister to Sweden, will fly to Amsterdam Wednesday afternoon.

Sound Men's Strike Cancels Film Work

Hollywood, July 16 (A.P.).—The week-old strike of sound technicians at Columbia Studios, still unsettled, today caused the motion picture plant to go officially "dark."

Approximately 800 employes, including strikers, are affected. The strikers ask wage increases.

Announcement was made through the Association of Motion Picture Producers that Columbia had canceled contracts of all artists engaged on three films in production when the strike began.

The cancellation does not affect the studio's regular contract players, but only those engaged in pictures now in production or scheduled for immediate production. These include Nancy Carroll, Wallace Ford, Donald Cook, Victor Jory, Helen Twelvetrees, Alan Dinehart, Noel Madison, Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young.

Swim Guests Urged by Post To Come Early

Children With New Comics Let in Free Today by Airport Pool.

Today's the day for The Post's free swimming parties.

At the beautiful Airport Pool, just across the Fourteenth street bridge, the boys and girls who read yesterday's new comic section of The Post, will be guests, absolutely free. All they will need is a copy of the new comics which appeared in four colors yesterday.

Colored youths who read The Post will be entertained, free of charge and under the same conditions, at the Twelfth street Y. M. C. A.

Both pool managers urge the young Washingtonians to be there before 2 p. m. with their own bathing suits. There will be no waits, no delays, no giving of names. Just hand the doorman your copy of yesterday's comic section.

The new comic characters are really the hosts. They appeared together for the first time in Sunday's paper. There was Napoleon, the comical dog, and his master, Uncle Elby. There was Dixie Dugan and her boy and girl friends. There was Joe Palooka, the prize fighter. And then, there was Hairbreath Harry, the beautiful Belinda and, of course, the villian, Rudolph.

Every day the new comic friends are to be found in black and white drawings. Follow them, and from time to time they will sponsor parties and stunts for their young friends.

If you don't have the copy of yesterday's Post, get one now. Plan to go to the pools. They will be glad to see you. At the Airport, you will be in one of the finest swimming resorts anywhere.

Even if you don't want to swim, go out and enjoy the clean, white sandy beach, the swings, the seesaws and the chutes. It's all free, and the readers of The Post, up to 16 years of age, will be admitted just by presenting the comic page.

A brief announcement that plans had been "satisfactorily concluded" was made at the close of negotiations between the Newfoundland government and representatives of Pan-American Airways, the British-Owned Imperial Airways and the civil aviation branch of the Canadian department of national defense. The conference opened July 5.

Whom Did I Wed? Hutton Asks

Husband Wires Aimee $400 to Come Home to Clean Up Perplexing Situation; Wonders if He Married Angelus Temple.

Los Angeles, July 16 (A.P.).—David L. Hutton, jr., has wired his evangelist wife, Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, $400 to return to the United States from Paris in the hope of clearing up a marital situation which has him "very much perplexed."

He was silent on a report divorce was considered.

Contradictory plans and mental attitudes his wife has exhibited in cablegrams to Angelus Temple officials, Hutton said, had created a "difficult situation" for him.

"I wonder if I married just Aimee or the whole Temple?" mused the barytone.

Hutton declined to comment on a copyrighted article in the Los Angeles Examiner, saying negotiations were under way between the couple for a Mexican divorce.

Willedo Andrews, attorney for Mrs. McPherson Hutton, was quoted by the examiner as saying he had conferred with Vincent Riccardi, a specialist in Mexican divorces, but that their discussion was of a "confidential and privileged" nature.

Hutton revealed he had received a message from his wife asking "Are you coming over or shall I return?"

"It is very important that you return at once," Hutton cabled in reply, and sent the money order. "Important matters require your presence here. I am not coming over."

Hutton said, "She has never urged me to go there in a direct communication like this."

"I'm tired of having such requests relayed to me by Temple people. There must be a reason for such methods. Just the other day Temple officials called my mother's home and later called me, urging me to go to Paris at once."

Mrs. McPherson Hutton is in France with her nurse, Miss Bernice Middleton, and her daughter, Mrs. Roberta Semple Smythe. She recently underwent an operation in Paris.

Paris, July 16 (U.P.).—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, American evangelist, returned to Paris today from a visit to her daughter, Roberta, at Hendaye on the Franco-Spanish frontier, and disappeared abruptly.

It was rumored that Mrs. Hutton's sudden departure from the American hospital last week might necessitate a second operation. The evangelist had been recuperating from a mysterious operation here.

Boy, 13, Tells Of Truths Set Out in Bible

Damuel Foretold of World Unemployment, Declares Young Lecturer.

Two hundred persons packed the Hotel Continental ballroom last night to hear a lecture by 13-year-old Jack Barry, known as the world's youngest astrologist, metaphysician, textualist, numerologist, philosopher and prophet.

Jack's subject was "Are We Living in the Last Age?" He attempted to prove that we are, pointing out that prophecies, thousands of years old, which are found in the Bible, have come true. He showed how the scriptures have foretold all the major events in the history of the world.

Damuel, he said, foretold the present world-wide unemployment; Isaiah foretold the airship, and Job the wireless. The growing tendency among many today to fall away from the teachings of the Bible was predicted in the scriptures, said Jack.

The boyish-looking, blue-eyed youngster spoke without hesitation, using the vocabulary of a man three times his age. His enunciation, though still a bit boyish, was a good imitation of an elocutionist. His gestures, though not forceful or always appropriate, were frequent and spontaneous.

After his lecture he gave astrological counsel to those in the audience who volunteered their birthdays.

Eugene, a numerologist who has traveled with Jack and his mother, and has appeared on a number of similar programs with them in other cities, introduced the young lecturer. Eugene also read the numbers of certain people in the audience. Jack's mother, Mrs. Violet Monica Barry (Mme. Monica), astrologist and numerologist, was introduced.

Spoke for Roosevelt.

Jack has been lecturing since he was 3 years old. He has spoken from platforms in 32 States, Canada and Mexico. He gave campaign speeches for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Sioux City, Iowa, is his birthplace, and it was there that he first spoke publicly. Mrs. Barry boasts that he began talking when he was 18 months old.

When he was 8 years old, the courts of Los Angeles tried to force him to go to school, but he appealed the case, acted as his own lawyer, and won it by outspelling the jury, beating the judge in arithmetic and shaming the prosecuting attorney in history.

Lithuania Fliers May Lose Permits

Departure Made Without License to Fly Over Foreign Lands.

E. Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Saturday announced that on the basis of reports received by the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, Stephen W. Darius and Stanley T. Girch had taken off from New York yesterday for Lithuania in violation of Federal regulations governing flights by American airmen over foreign countries.

"The departure was made by the airmen without receiving permission from the Department of Commerce, which permission would be premised on prior authorization of foreign countries over which the flight is planned," Mr. Mitchell declared. "Authorization to fly over Newfoundland, Ireland, England, the Netherlands, Poland and Lithuania had been applied for, but had not been received at the time the airman took off. If an investigation which is now being made by the department, substantiates the violation, the penalty will be the revocation of the licenses of both the airmen and the aircraft."

Pollard Sets Aug. 17 For Extra Session

Assembly to Pick Repeal Vote Date and Decide Fate of Beer.

Richmond, Va., July 16 (A.P.).—A proclamation, calling the General Assembly to meet in extra session August 17, was made public today by Gov. John Garland Pollard.

The proclamation, signed by the governor yesterday, came after two-thirds of the members of both houses of the General Assembly had petitioned the executive for the special session, urging action on legalization of beer, the setting of a date for a repeal referendum, and action on public works issues.

Although the governor had said that the session would be called on August 17, the call was not officially extended until the issuance of the proclamation.

Raising Snakes for Use as Pets Proves 'Charm' to Man and Wife

Post Staff Photo.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Ritenour, proprietors of the Maryland Snake Farm, Laurel, Md., handle a 12-foot India python as if it were a plaything. The farm raises snakes for "pets" and for commercial use.

Most Poisonous Reptiles Are Handled With Ease by Ritenours.

Raising snakes may be obnoxious to some people, but not to Mrs. Howard C. Ritenour and her husband, proprietors of the Maryland Snake Farm, Laurel, Md., it's just one charm after another.

And, strange as it may seem, the snakes are raisedd to be sold as pets. Big black snakes and small squirmy king snakes, of the nonpoisonous species, all play a similar part in catching the eye of the pet gathering public.

This, however, only forms a portion of the snake market. Zoos, circuses, carnivals and witch doctors all seek the strange farm for reptiles with which to carry on their respective trades.

Fangs Are Left In.

"Business hasn't been so good in the last two years," Ritenour told a Post reporter. "One place in which I lose out is in not removing the poisonous fangs. Numbers of shows can't use them unless the fangs are removed.

"But I don't do this because it shortens the life of the snake. They haven't long to live in captivity, anyhow, and I like to see them alive as long as possible."

The fact that the poisonous fangs are present is of no concern, however, as far as the snake farmers themselves are concerned. Both the man and his wife have no hesitancy in removing the most poisonous diamond back rattler from his cage and fondling him as a child would a toy.

The greatest delight in snake farming, Mr. Ritenour went on to point out, lies in the expeditions to capture the suarian squirmers. Weeks at a time are spent in the out-of-doors tracking the snakes to their lairs.

Caught at Habitat.

There is no way of making the capture. The snake hunter merely studies the nature and locality of the native habitat, then seeks these places and pitches camp for the "hunting" season. Some of the small snakes are shipped to the farm from other dealers.

The Maryland Snake Farm, which recently moved from Thurmont, Md., where it was known as Bill's Snake Farm, is located 4 miles north of Laurel on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

At the farm there is an educational exhibit of approximately 75 snakes—one of the few places where the public has the opportunity of hearing the Western rattler "in action."

Ritenour received considerable publicity last fall when he delivered a large assortment of the reptiles to the Washington Zoo. He also receives a revenue from the sale of the snake skins.

Camp Accords War Veteran Signal Honor

Francis P. Vallely Receives C. M. T. C. Distinction for Heroism.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, July 16.—The Field Artillery C. M. T. camp, which opened last week at Fort Hoyle, Md., has been named Camp Francis P. Vallely, in honor of a former private, first class, in Battery E, Sixth Field Artillery of the First Division.

Private Vallely was killed in action in Coullernelle, France, April 27, 1918. He was awarded posthumously the Distinguished Service Cross with the following citation:

"Under a heavy bombardment he voluntarily went to the assistance of other soldiers who had been buried in a dugout by enemy shell fire and was killed while engaged in this heroic action."

The camp is commanded by Brig. Gen. Ernest D. Scott, with Lieut. Col. Sherman Miles as executive officer and in charge of training. Other camp officers are First Lieut. Year-Round Bloom Hunted For Middle Atlantic Garden

Department of Agriculture Experiments Conducted at Glendale Plant Introduction Garden by Benjamin Y. Morrison.

(Associated Press.)

Summer to many gardeners may be merely a time for routine cultivating and weeding, but Department of Agriculture experts provide hints guaranteed to keep any enterprising home gardener busy.

The present is the last chance to plant gladiolus bulbs which will come to bloom, on the average, within ninety days, just before the frost period sets in. Gladiolus bulbs will thrive in any soil, except the very heaviest.

Most spring bulbs should not be planted until September or October, but Federal experts advise that it's a good idea to get orders in now. Many bulb concerns only carry a small stock on hand.

In most neighborhoods, it is now too hot to plant new flowers. Those who would like to have a few perennials for private edification can, however, buy seeds now. Late July or early August will be planting time. The same holds true for those popular biennials—sweet Williams, fox gloves, and their floral fraternity.

August is sowing time for pansies, forget-me-nots, and English daisies. Late August is an excellent period for setting out evergreens whose period of active root growth will come in the fall, so that winter will find them well-established.

Cornflowers, Shirley poppies, nigella, and other annuals can be planted early in September.

Benjamin Y. Morrison is conducting experiments for the Department of Agriculture at the United States Plant Introduction Garden, at Glenndale, Md., in an effort to find a series of flowers which could provide some sort of blossom for the Middle Atlantic garden all year round.

500 Paraguayans Killed in Fighting

1,000 Others Said to Have Been Wounded in Gran Chaco Attack.

La Paz, Bolivia, July 16 (U.P.).—Official announcement was made tonight that 500 Paraguayan soldiers were killed and 1,000 wounded in an attack on Bolivian positions in the Fort Gondra sector of the Gran Chaco territory late yesterday.

General Hans Kundt, German commander-in-chief of the Bolivian forces in the Chaco, vigorously denied Paraguayan claims that 3,000 of his men were killed or wounded in fighting about Fort Gondra last week. He said Bolivians withdrew from some positions for strategic reasons, and that he had no more than 2,000 men in that sector.

Bolivia has lodged formal protests with the League of Nations, the International Red Cross and the Geneva Red Cross Commission against the burning of the Bolivian field hospital at Campana. It was alleged that the hospital was set afire by Paraguayan troops. All the inmates perished.

B-J Aircraft Corp. Merged With General

Factory Now Engaged in Production of 2-Seater Plane for Navy.

By Charles E. Planck

General Motors, recently established as a power in aviation circles by its acquisition of important manufacturing companies in the industry, has begun its program of consolidating its activities.

The B-J Aircraft Corporation becomes an integral part of General Aviation Manufacturing Corporation, according to an announcement by E. R. Breech, chairman of the board of North American Aviation, Inc., the holding company.

General Aviation Manufacturing Corporation is the successor of the old Fokker Aircraft Corporation, the first active interest of General Motors in flying, and one in which little was done before the slump hit the industry. The B-J corporation, mostly engaged in development and manufacture of military planes, is the successor of the Berliner-Joyce Aircraft Corporation.

J. M. Schoonmaker, jr., remains as president of the combined companies. Temple N. Joyce, long known as designer and organizer in aviation, will be executive vice president and general manager, and F. S. Hubbard will be his assistant. L. R. Beardslee is secretary and John C. Felli treasurer.

The General Aviation Manufacturing Corporation is now completing its development of a fast, all-metal transport plane, which, with one engine carries 10 passengers at well over 200 miles an hour. Planes of this type are under construction for Japan, the Swissair Transport Co. in Switzerland, and Pan-American Airways.

The company is also developing a trimotor plane to carry 16 passengers for modern high-speed air travel. Both these planes are low-wing monoplanes, streamlined to a great degree and with retractable landing gear.

The corporation is now completing an order of two-seater observation planes for the Navy, and is developing a two-seater and a single-seater fighter for the Navy.

The consolidation is consistent with the policy of General Motors for increasing efficiency in manufacturing and engineering by a close interrelation of all its activities.

Sex Movies Discredit U. S. In Africa, Says Rev. Stokes

Canon of Washington Cathedral Finds Modern Devices Have Penetrated to Darkest Portions of Nation to Replace Crude Methods.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

Modern electric light now illuminates the Dark Continent and the railroad train, steamer, airplane and motor car have largely replaced the crude methods of transportation in Africa, according to the Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington Cathedral and former secretary of Yale University.

He is in Washington again after five months on that continent as the Carnegie visiting lecturer to the universities of the Union of South Africa.

Dr. Stokes was accompanied by Mrs. Stokes, his daughter, Miss Olivia Stokes, and another Washingtonian, Miss Mary Marvin Breckinridge.

They traveled about 12,000 miles from Capetown to Cairo, nearly half by train, 3,000 miles each by motor and steamer, and a few hundred miles by airplane.

"It is impressive to know," said Dr. Stokes, "the extent that modern civilization has entered Africa."

Trailed by Depression.

Dr. Stokes said he had not escaped the depression in Africa.

Dr. Stokes said that in France, Spain, England and Belgium he saw many cathedrals but none that has a more glorious location than Washington Cathedral.

"I know of no cathedral which seems to me to have a more beautiful architectural plan," said Dr. Stokes. "Liverpool is more original and has a combination of medieval and modern notes which is appealing, but from the standpoint of pure esthetic beauty and for creating an atmosphere for worship I think that Washington Cathedral will take an even higher rank.

"No modern cathedral of which I know has more promise than Washington Cathedral from the point of view of stained glass.

"Like all other institutions, the cathedral has been passing through difficult financial times, especially owing to the inability during the depression to collect certain very large subscriptions and legacies made in recent years, but I believe that the hardest days are over. I am sure that friends of the cathedray, now that financial conditions are improving in the country, will rally to its support and put it in a position to render its most effective spiritual service to the Nation."

Dr. Stokes had high praise for the work of the missionary in Africa.

"We visited scores of missions," he said, "Catholic and Protestant, and I came back with a profound admiration for what they are doing. The work of the Society of White Fathers (Roman Catholic), the Scotch Presbyterians, the Anglican Church Missionary Society, all are great factors in the education and advancement of the natives. The African has no better friend than the missionary who has learned to know and understand him. Of course, there are large sections in Africa still where few natives are Christians, but in some places, notably Uganda, the Christian religion is the faith of a very large proportion of the population. Nothing is more inspiring than to attend the Anglican Cathedral at Uganda with its congregation of 2,500, practically all natives, most of the clergy native and its honorary Canon Appolo, who is one of the most honored men in east Africa. He does a great deal of work among the pigmies.

"While in Africa I attended many meetings of the joint councils for the Phelps Stokes Fund, made up of Europeans and natives, something like the interracial commissions existing in all our Southern cities. At these meetings there was always great interest in the progress of the American Negro and there was general discussion regarding this matter and the position of natives in Africa.

"The problem of adjusting race relations in America is as nothing in comparison to the situation in South Africa, where it is extremely critical. The natives there undoubtedly have improved their position as the result of missionary education. In spite of some unfortunate actions of the government the higher courts can always be relied upon to protect the natives' interest. There is a growing public opinion among the young English and Dutch which is determined that the natives shall have full justice."

Education Advances.

As Carnegie visiting lecturer to the Union of South Africa, Dr. Stokes lectured before all of the universities.

Dr. Stokes said that the Union of South Africa had done well in developing universities, colleges and schools for white students, but as a state was not progressive in matters of native education, leaving this mainly to the missionaries with some government help in financing.

The motion picture has invaded Africa along with other evidences of modern civilization, but Dr. Stokes expressed regret that he found, as in South America, that the American motion picture film had done much to discredit the reputation of the United States.

"Sex and crime films of American origin have a dangerous effect on native peoples and I heard them criticized for this many times while in Africa," he said.

To the Stockholders of
The Croft Brewing Company

On behalf of your Board of Directors, we are pleased to advise you that your Company has concluded arrangements which will enable it to acquire 60% of the capital stock of the Bismarck Brewing Company, which will be organized to own the plant, trade-marks and good will of the Standard Brewery, Inc., at Baltimore, Md., for many years brewers and distributors of "Bismarck Beer".

This brewery, established in the early sixties, has been kept in excellent condition and recently modernized, and will be ready for operation within a few weeks. Its estimated capacity will be 150,000 barrels per annum. The property occupies some two and one-half acres, located at Patterson Park and Collington Avenues in the Curtis Bay district of Baltimore. In addition to the substantial buildings, which house the brewing, fermenting, bottling and other equipment, the brewery has large storage capacity deep underground in a series of vaulted tunnels, providing unusual facilities for aging the product at low refrigerating cost. Since the storage tunnels cover considerably more ground area than the present buildings, there is ample room for expansion.

Under our control the policy will be to employ this plant for the brewing of lager beer of high quality. "Bismarck Beer" formerly enjoyed an excellent reputation and practically the entire output was consumed locally. Prior to prohibition Baltimore proper, with a population of about 733,000, supported thirteen breweries. The population is now estimated at 826,000, and only three breweries are now in operation. In addition to the local market, distribution is now planned in other large centers of population along the Atlantic seaboard. Facilities for distribution in New York and New Jersey will be available through our connections and the Croft sales force in Boston will be prepared to undertake distribution in New England.

Your Directors feel that the position of your Company will be strengthened by this acquisition in the field of lager beer, which will complement the Boston plant's expected annual production of 240,000 barrels of ale.

In order to finance this acquisition and to provide additional working capital, your Company has obtained a commitment for the sale of an additional 300,000 shares of its stock. The capitalization of The Croft Brewing Company consists solely of common stock, par value $1.00 per share, of which on July 14, 1933, 884,439* shares were outstanding. Giving effect to these transactions as of July 14, your Company would thus control some 330,000 barrels of annual productive capacity, capitalized at less than 3.6 shares per barrel.

Respectfully yours,
THE CROFT BREWING COMPANY
By R. P. Bischoff
President.

July 17, 1933.

*In addition to the outstanding stock, unissued shares are reserved as follows: subscriptions by officers—23,333 shares at $1.50 per share; options to directors, officers and employees—83,664 shares at $1.50 per share; all of the unissued and treasury stock remaining out of the total authorized 1,000,000 shares is subject to options at $1.00 per share, issued in connection with financing. None of the above options extends more than two years after the Company begins commercial operation.

Dial Flashes

By Robert D. Heinl.

IN addition to President Roosevelt's message, tonight the 300,000 recruited foresters in many States throughout the country will hear talks by Secretary of War Dern, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of Labor Perkins. Robert Fechner, director of the corps, will introduce the speakers. (WMAL, WJSV—9:30 p. m.)

More than 1,500 radio sets recently have been installed in the various camps from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Arrangements have been made, following a special notice sent to the camps by Director Fechner, for the foresters to hear the greeting over radios set up in mess halls, tents and near camp fires. The men will be assembled at loudspeakers in groups of 200.

"A Scrap of Paper" will be the Radio Guild offering this afternoon. (WMAL—3 o'clock.)

The dytharune guitar, claimed to be the only one in the world, will make its debut over WRC in the Revolving Stage presentation. (WRC—1 p. m.)

Ray Scudder, who said he got the idea in Hawaii, developed the dytharune to overcome the limitations of the usual steel guitar on which only limited harmonies can be obtained in conjunction with the melody. It has thirteen strings instead of the usual six and is designed to stand on legs.

"THE Consumer and the Farm Bill," will be the subject of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace over WJSV at 7:15 p. m.

Chester Lauck and Norris Goff, two young men from Arkansas, were close friends and chums for twenty years before their sudden rise to radio fame as Lum and Abner. (WRC, 9:30 p. m.)

Usually radio teams are brought together fairly late in life through professional contacts. Lauck and Goff were pals at college, and both had settled down in the little town of Mena, Ark., one in the wholesale grocery business and the other as manager of an automobile finance company, before they ever dreamed of becoming Lum Edwards and Abner Peabody.

Their professional careers began in the winter of 1930-31, when a flood swept through their section of the State. Benefit performances for the flood victims were put on in the towns and cities, and Lauck and Goff, who were known for their ability as mimics, wrote a sketch depicting life in one of the small towns in the hills of Arkansas.

They were so successful that the manager of a local radio station offered them an engagement. When that engagement was terminated they severed their business connections in Mena and hied to Chicago to seek an audition with N. B. C.

Both boys have a sincere admiration for the type of rural characters they portray, and their sketches have the ring of authenticity. They were successful again in Chicago and soon were heard over the networks. Later they went to the N. B. C. Station, WTAM, in Cleveland, where they have been presenting Lum and Abner, Ford Dealers of the Air, for some time.

Lauck, who plays Lum, is slender in build and over 6 feet in height, with black hair and a dark complexion, while Goff, who portrays Abner, is short, stocky and blond. Both are married.

A SCENE from "Glory Command," played by members of the screen cast, and a number of songs of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, locale of the picture, will be given during Hollywood on the Air over WRC at 11 o'clock tonight. Bruce Cabot, Frank Albertson, Betty Furness, Florence Lake and Arthur Lake of the cast will take part.

The Umbrian Glee Club of 40 voices, one of the oldest Negro choral organizations in America, will sing at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago tonight. (WMAL, 10:45 p. m.)

Listz's "Les Preludes" will be played by Schirmer and Schmitt, two pianos, over WRC at 4:30 p. m. The last half of the program will be devoted to playing the first movement of the Mozart-Greig sonata in G minor.

Helena Huntington Smith, author of "Dammed If They Do," will face the microphone in "America's Grub Street," at 4:45 p. m., over WJSV.

Baby Rose Marie, now 8 years old, is to star via WMAL at 6:15 o'clock tonight. A daughter of a trouper with George M. Cohan, she began her professional career at the age of 2. In fact, she is said to have learned to spell by seeing her name in electric lights 10 feet high.

When she was 3 years old, vacationing with her parents at Atlantic City, someone from a radio station there happened to hear her sing on the beach, invited her to go on the air—and discovered a new radio headliner. Later she broadcast in New York and was signed up by a broadcasting company.

Two years after her first broadcast at Atlantic City, she returned there to fill a two-day engagement at the Steel Pier, and remained for eight weeks as the headliner of the show.

Little Miss Rose Marie can learn one of her songs in five or ten minutes. In her stage and radio singing, she has often been accompanied by orchestras conducted by such directors as Paul Whiteman, Rudy Vallee and Vincent Lopez.

The flight into the stratosphere at the Century of Progress Exposition, originally scheduled for today, and which was to have been broadcast, has now been set for Wednesday night.

"After the Forest Camps, What?" will be considered by Dr. George J. Fisher, deputy chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America this afternoon (WRC, 2 o'clock.)

A "Five-Point Pedestrian Safety Plan" will be the proposition of George E. Keneipp, chairman of the transportation committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce tonight (WMAL, 8 o'clock).

ABOUT two years ago two maids sat before a radio and listened to a third maid and her brother sing. The two maids looked at each other. One maid, named Hazel, said to the second maid, named Jane, "I think we could sing with that girl and make a trio."

A week later, at a gathering which they both attended, the maid named Hazel passed a brief note down to a third maid, whose name was Grace.

As simple as that was how, Grace, Jane and Hazel, known on the Washington air waves as "Three Maids and a Mike," became the trio they are today. For Jane and Hazel were already singing together and Grace was singing with her brother. The note brought them together. An instant natural liking for each other, a triple desire for work and lots of it did the rest.

All adept at arranging and with the directive genius of Grace to lift them over bad spots, the easy-going nature of Hazel to still trouble and patience of Jane in persuading the other two to "try it once more," it was not long before they began to be noticed. Their big chance came on a local commercial program. Because of this they had to refuse a place on the All-Star After Dinner Club.

However, their commercial program went off for the summer. The All-Star program was again offered to them. This they accepted and will appear with that group Wednesday night. In addition to that the three maids will start a new sustaining series over WJSV at 6:15 o'clock tonight, with still another appearance at 10 o'clock Friday night.

PAUL ASH, whose interpretation of modern music skyrocketed to popular acclaim a few years ago, will be heard daily except Sunday, beginning today at 4:00 p. m., over WMAL, from the Casino at the Century of Progress exposition. On Sundays Ash will come in at the same time over WRC.

Clifford Davis Dies.

Cumberland, Md., July 16.—Clifford E. Davis, 63, who resided near Mount Hermon Church, east of here, died early yesterday at Memorial Hospital.

Walt Mason, Himself

The World's Most Famous Rhymester

"I DO not wish to fly," said Hiram Egbert Spry; "the good old earth has solid worth, and to it I will tie. I see the airship start, I see my friends depart; with fear I'm chilled that they'll be killed—it nearly breaks my heart. There is no safety there, up younder in the air, except for crows and birds like those, for man it is a snare. And every day we hear of smashups far and near, and men descend, end over end, while coroners uprear. Each day unlucky wights fall down from dizzy heights, while widows weep and lawyers keep their vigils days and nights. I'd hate to fall today, and have morticians say they'd have to take a garden rake to put my bones away. And so I'll climb inside my flivver for a ride; at modest speed I will proceed, with safety as my guide. I'll let the jazzy crowds fly up among the clouds where eagles prance, and take their chance on caskets, biers and shrouds." The airship zoomed and soared, and all the folks abroad came safely back to hall and shack, and no one kicked or roared. "The journey was a treat," said Mike, to Heck, to Heck and Pete; "This flying stuff is good enough—it surely can't be beat." The flivver, on a spree, ran up against a tree; and Hiram Sprey sat down to die, with broken neck and knee.

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

New York—The "ideal marriages" of Hollywood may tumble into a shambles, but those on Broadway seem to go on forever.

The stage really has two such wedlocks, that is, where both husband and wife are as successful together in the theater as they are in their domestic life. One is Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne; the other is Guthrie McClintic and Katherine Cornell.

The Lunts have been wedded since they first played together in "The Guardsman" in 1924. Most of the time they appear in the same play, but they safeguard themselves by stipulating in all their contracts that they must always be in the same town.

Miss Cornell refuses to have any director other than her husband.

Live in Seclusion.

These two couples have one thing in common—they rarely appear in public. Outside the theater they are homebodies, never joining in with those celebrities who feel they must mingle in night life to bolster their popularity.

Three years ago in London I saw the Lunts at the Old Kit Kat Club one night. In six years' acquaintance with them, that is the only time I saw them outside of the theater or their home. On their vacations, they either go into seclusion on their Genessee Depot, Wis., farm or, at a fishing village in Spain which is never frequented by tourists. They have a small circle of old, intimate friends, the only guests they ever entertain.

Only in a few rare instances have I ever glimpsed the McClintics in even so public a place as a restaurant. Outside the theater, they spend all their time either in their East River penthouse, or at their out-of-the-way country home up the Hudson River.

Ambition Realized.

A long ambition of the second engineer of the S. S. X——, one of those freighters that ply out of New York to the Mediterranean, has been to attend one of those high hat, exclusive clubs in the expensive Fifties. Just the one trace of snobbishness in an otherwise good seaman.

For months he skimped on his salary until he acquired the necessary tariff, and the other night he entered such a club. Despite his protests, the haughty head waiter insisted on putting him at a table half hidden by the orchestra.

All evening the second engineer sat there, unattended by the waiters. But he didn't mind. He was seeing high society night life at close range, and fulfilling his ambition. In the late hours he departed. But the waiters hadn't noticed him, had served him nothing and so there was no check. The evening, so long hoped for, had cost him nothing.

Capital's 3 Grand Old Women Still Wage Battle for Ideals

Dr. Mussey, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Hopkins Carry On.

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

They are still in command, those three grand old women, captains of the Good Ship Washington, Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey, 83 years old, who has fought the good fight and led many movements for recognition of women in the District of Columbia for 50 years; Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, the last living Washington to be born at Mount Vernon, who has held the torch for the procession of women pledged to patriotic works for many of her 77 years, and Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, 82 years old, originator and banner-bearer in welfare, philanthropic and sociological work in the District of Columbia.

Every time a bill is pending relating to the status of women in the District of Columbia or of the Nation, Dr. Mussey, author of many bills herself which have wiped out discriminations against women, makes her rounds of visits to members of Congress and executives of the Government to express her opinion and insist that the women of the Nation must be served. They listen to her, too, because she knows whereof she speaks.

Each time a woman is appointed to an executive position in local or national government this woman leader makes a personal call or pens a note in her fine Spencerian hand to the White House or to Congress approving such appointment. She also does not hesitate to request that women be included in the appointments.

One of College's Founders.

Dr. Mussey was one of the founders of the Washington College of Law in 1896, the first white law school to admit women as students. She also was the pioneer woman dean of a law school.

In 1898 Dr. Mussey procured the passage of the law giving married women in the District of Columbia right to their own earnings and making them equal guardians with the father of their children. She drew the first bill starting the campaign which resulted in the independent citizenship laws for married women, under which American women, married to foreigners did not lose their American citizenship.

Today Dr. Mussey sits enthroned as the grand counselor of women who want full legal rights of every kind in the District of Columbia. No longer does she go daily to her law offices or to the Washington College of Law, but women lawyers and heads of great movements, men and women alike, go to see her, to get her advice and support on many subjects that puzzle them.

When her birthday rolls around each May 13, Washington women lawyers, women of patriotic organizations and other organizations of women, gather to pay her tribute at some headquarters, usually the Women's City Club, which she was instrumental in founding.

Ideals Are Guarded.

The Little Girl of Old Mount Vernon, now Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, as the last of the long line of Washingtons who were born at Mount Vernon, stands ever on guard that the National Capital, of which she has been a part most of her womanhood as a member of patriotic organizations here, and in the last decade a resident here, does not let down any of the patriotic standards advocated by George Washington, her ancestor.

Mrs. Howard is always among those present at patriotic rallies and meetings to discuss means of upholding the ideals of the early founders, and is always ready to take up the cudgels against any influence which would in any way bring down those standards.

Often this woman, whose patrician resemblance to George Washington is remarkable, appears to register her opinion and to stand firmly against any movement or sentiment which she considers unpatriotic, whether it is advocated by groups of citizens, or by our city fathers. She studies the news, approves or disapproves, and then steps forth to do battle, if she thinks it is necessary.

Mrs. Howard is one of the founders of the Children of the American Revolution and a strong adherent of the theory that the children of the city should be taught respect to the flag in the schoolroom, in the playgrounds and in their daily lives.

She is a charter member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution and once was a candidate for president general of that patriotic organization.

Leads Pilgrimages.

Whenever women patriotic conventions in Washington make a ceremonial of visiting Mount Vernon to put wreaths on the tombs of George and Martha Washington, Eleanor Washington Howard is apt to lead this pilgrimage. She will relate to the eager women how she remembers Mount Vernon in her very early childhood and the occasion when Anne Pamela Cunningham, of South Carolina, came to talk to Mrs. Howard's father, John Augustine Washington, about the purchase of Mount Vernon.

With tears in her eyes she will tell how the family grieved that the ancestral halls and grounds must through financial necessity, pass out of the family. But she always adds her stint of praise for the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, of which Miss Cunningham was the first regent.

A fierce and determined war on the system that allowed human beings to dwell in alleys under adverse conditions has been waged by Mrs. Archibald Hopkins for a quarter of a century. While the alley homes, good and bad ones, are still with us in many cases, this valiant campaigner has been successful in raising funds with which the block of model homes for working people in Washington have been erected south of the United States Capitol under the title of the Ellen Wilson Memorial Homes.

It was Mrs. Hopkins who first interested Ellen Axson Wilson, the first wife of Woodrow Wilson, in the conditions of the alley dwellers in the very shadow of the Capitol. Mrs. Wilson gave her ardent support to the movement.

One of the first places Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt went after she took her place as First Lady of the Nation, was to visit the alley dwellings and model homes with Mrs. Hopkins. She has given her support to the movement since the days when she was the wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson administration.

For 31 years, Mrs. Hopkins has been the president of the Board of Managers of the District of Columbia Home for Incurables. President Wilson appointed her a member of the board of the United States Hospital for the Insane.

During the World War Mrs. Hopkins served as chairman of the Woman's Division of the Council of National Defense for the District of Columbia and was particularly active in social service work for the council.

Pie Tacks!

Improper Containers Used by Growers of Berries and Similar Fruits.

(Associated Press.)

A tax on and tacks in pie are two different things and the Agriculture Department says the American pie eaters will swallow the former but not the latter.

L. C. Carey, of the Agricultural Economic Bureau, said yesterday complaints had been received that tacks were being found in commercial pies due to improper containers used by American growers of huckleberries, blackberries and similar fruits.

"Commercial pie manufacturers of this country may be forced to buy Canadian-grown fruit," Carey said, adding that "Consumers do not like tacks in their pie." Canadian growers, he said, used better containers.

It was recalled that the 30-cent a bushel wheat processing tax applies to flour used for making pie crusts increases the cost 4.22 per cent a pound, but no complaints had been received by pie eaters on it.

Joseph Fletcher's Widow Dies.

New York, July 16 (U.P.).—Mrs. Elizabeth Fletcher, widow of Joseph Ennis Fletcher, died today of complications following a fall several weeks ago. She is survived by her two sons, Reginald A. Fletcher, Eastern manager of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and Hal Fletcher, advertising manager of the New York World-Telegram.

Woman Hunting $8 Estate Learns Ad Was in Memory Column.

"Hey, mister, my mother wants to know who is this feller who has a house to rent for $8!"

The foregoing interrupted a conversation betwen the city editor and the star reporter of the Free Lance Star in Fredericksburg, Va., yesterday.

"What house?" was the query asked by both men at once.

"This one," said the urchin, handing the city editor a bit of paper which he immediately recognized as having been torn from the pages of the Fredericksburg paper.

The clipping described an attractive place with an acre of land "for rent to a reliable party for $8 per month."

Then the C. E. smiled and told the youngster to take the clipping back to his mother and point out to her that the heading read, "Thirty Years Ago Today in Fredericksburg."

Dad's Decision

(All rights protected by the George Matthew Adams Service. Trade Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.)

By Mary Brook Lucas

"Judy, Judy, where are you?" calls Mother. "I've just seen Dad and he says we are leaving tomorrow, so let's get busy with our packing!" Mother's sheer crepe suit is in a casual design of black and white. The very plain cartwheel hat and the initialed bag are both of white crepe.

"Honestly, Mother? Tomorrow? Say, I'm thrilled to 'get going!' I've been sleeping all afternoon. Is it time to dress for dinner?" yawns Judy. She wears a pale blue satin gown with an adorable bolero. Hand-drawn ecru Alencon lace trims the gown as well as the jacket. "Good old Dad—he is a peach!"

"Speaking of me, young lady?" calls Dad from behind the evening paper. "Say, Mother, that's quite a hat—new, isn't it?" "Yes, darling, and the latest!" returns that gracious lady. Satin, the favored material for early fall in a brown beret, is extremely pert with its brown and white feather.

"Berets are youthful!" exclaims Judy. "No wonder women are unwilling to give them up! There are no age limits placed on the beret! I'm going to say adios to Helen! See you later!" The large black stitched taffeta hat is the last word in chic. It is lined with cool white linen.

Lenin Wins Place in Mural

New York, July 16 (A.P.).—Diego Rivera is going to paint the figure of Lenin in a New York mural after all.

The Mexican artist, ousted from Rockefeller Center for including the Russian revolutionist in a huge wall painting, began work today on a mural for the New Workers School, telling the story of the revolutionary tradition in America.

"I am working for the first time in a headquarters controlled by the Workers and dedicated to the revolutionary movement," said Rivera, who was attired in a red shirt and artist's smock.

"The painting will reveal the class conflicts in the very foundations of the country's economic structure, which, growing with its development, caused the attempt to complete the bourgeois revolution during the Civil War and make necessary the proletarian revolution today."

This time Rivera will put a red flag on each side of Lenin's head. One banner will bear the hammer and sickle of Communism, and the other will show the pine tree and snake of the "don't tread on me" period of the American Revolution.

Thomas Jefferson and Samuel Adams will be pictured side by side with Eugene V. Debs and William Haywood, but not even a corner of George Washington's peaked hat will show.

"I do not consider Washington as a central revolution figure," said the artist, "even though I recognize his significance as a leader of the American war for independence."

The signing of the Declaration of Independence, enslaving of the Negroes, and the hanging of Nathan Hale will be other scenes in the mural. By way of contrast, Rivera said, John D. Rockefeller and other leading financiers, will be included

Freighter Aground On Coast Floated

San Francisco, July 16 (A.P.).—The freighter Henry S. Grove, which went aground at Lime Point in the Golden Gate in a fog last night, was floated by tugs today and proceeded to drydock for inspection.

The vessel, commanded by Capt. J. McKenzie, carries a crew of 35 men. It never was regarded as being in danger. A Coast Guard cutter stood by during the night, however.

The Henry S. Grove is an intercoastal freighter operated by the Argonaut Steamship Line, Inc. It was en route for Seattle when it went aground.

Russell Janney Returns to Theater as Active Producer—Thalberg Carries on

A New Musical First for Fall On Janney List

Irving Thalberg Back From Europe, Health Restored; Other Theater News.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Conceding a modicum of credibility to such ancient and honorable adages as those which say, "Coming events cast their shadows before," "Straws show which way the wind blows," and the like, it would seem that those of the faithful who pay heed to signs, omens and portents have every reason to expect the impending season in the legitimate theater to be one of the most active in recent years.

This is made evident by the persistent barrage of production announcements being laid down around the dramatic desks of the country by the prominent producers who seem finally to have awakened to the new spirit of the day and to the advisability and probable profit of shaking a leg in the general direction of creative and useful occupation.

Foremost among these, at the moment, is Russell Janney, who has remained more or less in an unsung and secluded hibernation since his memorable productions of "The Vagabond King" and "White Eagle."

It appears that Mr. Janney is enthusiastically contemplating the most active season he has undertaken in his entire career as a producer—a career that has included such artistic achievements as "Marjolaine," with Peggy Wood; "Sancho Panza," with Otis Skinner; four productions of "The Vagabond King" in America and one which enjoyed an entire year's run in London; "White Eagle" and several dramatic plays.

Mr. Janney's imminent enterprises are outlined in this department in a statement contrived in his accustomed cogent style by Mr. Robert Edgar Long, one of the more sapient of the stentors, who is well known to Washington as a former cymbal-whanger for Col. William Harryman Rapley's National Theater—but this is almost too far back for the present cinema-radio-wrapped-in-cellophane generation to remember, although, at that, Mr. Long and some of the rest of us who DO remember it are still this side of a hundred!—and more recently as a de luxe exploiteer of such seductive celluloid confections as reach an avid public through the far-flung facilities of United Artists.

Says Mr. Long: "Mr. Janney's first production, which now seems to be reaching the rehearsal stage, will be an operetta based on an original play by Justin Huntley McCarthy, from whose 'If I Were King' was fashioned the highly successful 'Vagabond King.' The new work, as yet untitled, has a libretto by Brian Hooker and Mr. Janney, and a musical score by Franklin Hauser, a new composer for whom the producer predicts a brilliant career.

"Such grand opera barytones as Lawrence Tibbet and John Thomas are said to have waxed enthusiastic over Mr. Franklin's music.

"Since Mr. Janney also has accepted a score by Hugo Felix for a production based on a continental play produced in Budapest and Vienna and has had Rudolf Friml at work for some time on the music for an original operetta indications are that he will present more than one ambitious musical during the approaching season.

"From sources close to Mr. Janney it has been learned that he has under consideration a revival of 'The Vagabond King,' with practically the entire original cast that appeared during its run of 62 weeks at the old Casino Theater, New York."

The indication would seem to be that the outlook in July has not made Janney wary!

It should mean much to those who are appreciative of a particularly acute insight into the intricacies of successful motion picture production, and the stimulus it affords the entire industry by setting an especially hot pace in the race for artistic preeminence, that Irving Thalberg and his wife, Norma Shearer, sailed from Southampton on the S. S. Majestic several days since and will arrive in New York tomorrow, whence they will proceed at once to Hollywood and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, where one is the guiding genius of production and the other one of the leading stars.

Mr. Thalberg, one of the youngest executives in the business, was forced into his long vacation by the threat of permanent ill health. It is a part of the happy report of his return to active service that his physical well-being has been completely restored.

Thus are the myriad persistent rumors of Mr. Thalberg's permanent severance from his high post with M-G-M seemingly laid definitely to rest.

Sidney Lust, veteran picture man and one of the more prominent independent exhibitors operating theaters in Washington and vicinity, has recently, in effect, added a public service and educational department to his other considerable activities.

In cooperation with Mr. Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools in Prince Georges County, Md., Mr. Lust has articled himself to supply visual education in the Prince Georges public schools one hour each, once a week.

Mr. Lust will furnish educational film subjects and motion picture machine operators free of charge to the school authorities in this forward step in method in imparting knowledge to the younger generation.

The feasibility of this form of visual education has been successfully demonstrated for many years in the Capital, especially in the District Americanization School, conducted by Miss Maude Aiton.

After long-drawn-out negotiations carried on between Hollywood and London, the frequently rumored signing of Constance Cummings by the new Joseph Schenck-Darryl Zanuck producing company, Twentieth Century Pictures, has been successfully consummated.

Following numerous telephonic conversations with Miss Cummings' agent in the British capital, Zanuck came to terms with the blonde star last week.

A week ago, or thereabouts, Miss Cummings became the bride of Benn W. Levy, noted English playwright, whom she met when he was in Hollywood writing for the screen and is now on her honeymoon.

It is reported that Miss Cummings will return to America and Hollywood about August 1, prepared to begin at once upon her first assignment. Choice of her first vehicle depends upon which of two stories now in preparation for her use is the first to be completed.

A chance meeting with Jimmie Lake, the Beau Brummel of burlesque, out at Mr. Griffith's ballyard at the double-header on Saturday was productive of the low-down on the Chesterfieldian Mr. Lake's immediate plans for the Gayety Theater.

The Gayety, it seems, will not reopen until the week of September 4, which is by way of being Labor Day week, one of the best seven-day periods on the calendar for the fattening of box-office statistics.

In addition to his stage entertainment, Mr. Lake is planning an innovation not undertaken in the National Capital since the old days of Kernan's Lyceum, the Gayety's predecessor as burlesque stronghold in the Distrcit.

If this formative project can be brought to successful conclusion, it will probably be the deciding factor in determining a tentative scheme that is rumbling around in the back of Jimmie's mind to keep the Gayety open 52 weeks a year, thus putting it on an equal footing with the picture houses—although pictures have nothing whatever to do with it. More of this later.

Carrie Nation and John L. Sullivan are part of the procession of colorful character who will step from the pages of comparatively recent history in "The Bowery," first of the Twentieth Century productions to be released through United Artists.

Carrie Nation, that ardent advocate of aggressive reform who gave initial impetus to the prohibition crusade by making over the interior of saloons with her hatchet, will be impersonated by Blanche Friderici, former Washington stock player.

The role of the "Boston Strong Boy" will be assumed by George Walsh, a one-time popular screen star whose prowess was in the direction of a Fairbanksian athleticism. This, to me, seems an incongruous piece of casting—or miscasting.

George Walsh, with his dark curly hair, swarthy complexion and black eyes is going to make Sullivan look like a Latin, instead of the typical Nordic that he was.

However, if the Corbett-Sullivan fight is to be shown in the picture, the black eyes might be okay!

In case you can not immediately place this here now George Walsh, he was the gangster "heavy" with Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett in "Me and My Gal," a pretty good Fox picture of last December, if that means anything to you—and it probably doesn't.

The addition of Beulah Bondi and George Coulouris to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the Sidney Howard comedy, "The Late Christopher Bean," completes the screen cast for this picture.

Previously selected to support Marie Dressler and Lionel Barrymore in this subject were Jean Hersholt, Helen Mack, Helen Shipman and Russell Hardie.

Miss Bondi and Mr. Coularis, who was seen, by the way, as the shrewd publisher in the American version of Edouard Bourdet's "Best Sellers" at the National last spring, should add appreciably to the effectiveness of the firm's rendition of the Howard comedy, since both were members of the original cast which presented it for many weeks on Broadway last season.

One of the Pickens Sisters, on the stage bill at the Earle this week, bears a striking resemblance to Myrna Loy. That is to say, she does to these dimming eyes from a point as remote as the second row of the mezzanine loge.

And speaking of the Pickens Sisters, this column can not too strongly recommend their vocalism to those who have an ear for the better sort of close harmony.

The fact that their arrangements are splendid examples of deft and expert treatment, wholly within the orthodox practices of good music, is no more important in their outstanding success than the excellent voices, gracious personalities and impeccable taste with which these three gifted young women are endowed.

I have not in years heard three voices so easy to listen to as those possessed by the trio of Pickenses now charming audiences on Thirteenth street.

This probably would make them the "easy Pickens" you have heard so much about, but so seldom met!

A Penner for Your Thoughts!

This amiable and idiotic young comedian, with the Roman candle cigars and bouncing bonnet, paying his sixth visit to Washington this week as vaudeville headliner at the Earle, is conclusively demonstrating that he belongs in the small and select class with Waring's Pennsylvanians and "Slim" Timblin, the only two acts on the stage that can repeat perennially in the Capital and always have the cash customers rolling in the aisles. There is only one Joe Penner and this is it!

Glen Echo Park.

While the weather was "murky overhead," as Harry Lauder used to put it, it did not deter the crowds from having fun at Glen Echo over the week-end.

The new deal and Government shake-ups were forgotten by many of the clerks of Uncle Sam as they took in the joys of the park. Crystal Pool was one of the popular places, as usual, while the Coaster Dips, the Airplane Swings, Old Mill and Midway pleased kids and grown-ups.

The beautiful Spanish ballroom was the mecca for hundreds on Saturday night, where they enjoyed the music of MacWilliams' Orchestra from 8:30 until 11:30 p. m.

Picnic parties continue to make July a banner month at the park and the management has provided everything for their comfort and convenience.

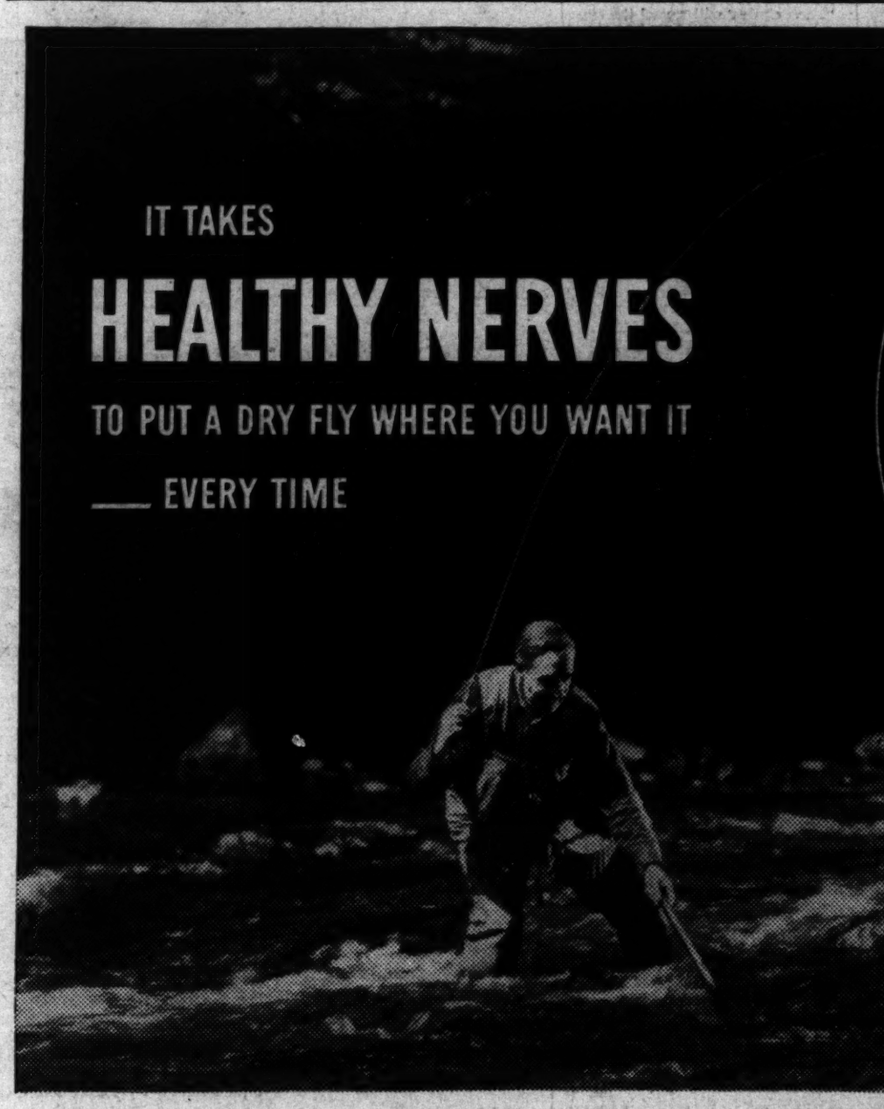
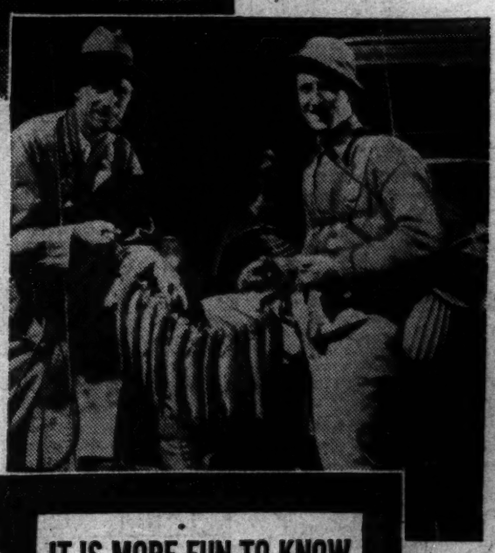
HEALTHY NERVES
TO PUT A DRY FLY WHERE YOU WANT IT
— EVERY TIME



●ABOVE—MILDNESS COMES FIRST in a cigarette, according to Mr. Neu, for enjoyment and for the sake of your nerves. Camel's rich, inviting flavor always seems to say, "Have another."

●ABOVE—ARTHUR J. NEU, of East Orange, N. J., pulls in a nice one! Few men know the importance of healthy nerves better than Art Neu does. He is national champion in dry-fly casting for accuracy. Just as a stunt, Mr. Neu has frequently flicked the ash off a friend's cigarette with a fly at 35 feet!

●RIGHT—A DAY'S SPORT is more enjoyable with plenty of Camels along, because you can smoke all you want—and still be ready for more when evening comes! Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves...never tire your taste! Camels are better for steady smoking. It is more fun to know!



Steady Smokers turn to Camels

ARTHUR J. NEU, champion fly-caster, says:

"Dry-fly fishing is a delicate art that takes the best a man's got in steadiness of hand and eye. To win the championship in accuracy at casting a dry fly, I had to have healthy nerves. And yet I smoke steadily—all I want to—without disturbing my nerves. That's because I prefer Camels. There is no question but that they are milder. And their rich, inviting flavor seems to say, 'Have another.'"

Turn to Camels. Like Mr. Neu you will find that Camels are milder...that their flavor suits your taste . . . that steady smoking never jangles your nerves. So begin today!

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. The more you smoke them, the more you'll like them. Costlier tobaccos do taste better.

Nats, Shut Out by Hadley, 7-0, Drop Into Tie for Lead With Yanks

Hurler Gives 4 Hits, 3 to Manush

Whitehill and McAfee Routed in Ninth as Six Cross Plate.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

THE last remaining vestige of Washington's lead in the American League penant race vanished yesterday into a miserable nothingness when the Nats met up with the man they sold down the river two years ago.

Irving Hadley, now bedecked in the uniform of the St. Louis Browns, the lowliest of the ports of call in a ball player's wanderings, came back to Griffith Stadium to plague the punchless Nats with a four-hit performance that is eloquently told in the Nats' share of the 7-to-0 score by which the Browns won the ball game.

And thus the Yankees moved into an actual tie for the American League leadership without moving a muscle, for rain up in the Bronx interrupted their nonstop winning streak of eight games. The rain in New York and Hadley in Washington proved the great levelers.

Manush Gets Three Hits.

Save for Heinie Manush, the Nats were a helpless lot against the fast curve of the Hadley fellow who had been shipped to Chicago and thence to St. Louis by the shifting tides of big-league baseball. Manush was responsible for 75 per cent of the hitting against Hadley with three singles. They were hitting nothing but singles off Hadley, and those as scattered as skyscrapers in the Sahara. Cronin got the fourth.

It was the misfortune of Earl Whitehill to be cast against the beef and brawn and effectiveness of the rotund Hadley, for Whitehill pitched no bad ball game, and had allowed only one run when he was dismissed from the mound in the ninth with two on base and none out.

McAfee Proves Failure.

Manager Cronin motined for help in the direction of Bill McAfee in the bull pen and it all proved to be a great mistake. The Browns fell upon McAfee like a long-lost brother come to lift the mortgage on the old homestead. They batted his offerings into a pulpy mass, scored six runs in the ninth and terminated with a flourish their losing streak of six straight.

Whitehill himself gave Hadley a run to work with in the second inning and that one run loomed ominously before the 8,000 customers as the game wore on into the late innings, with Hadley showing no signs of weakening and the Nats showing even less signs of bestirring themselves with their bats.

The run that would have proved sufficient to beat the Nats was forced in by Whitehill in the second after Burns and Mellilo had rapped out singles. A wild pitch put the runners on second and third and with two out, Whitehill put himself on the spot with a 3-0 count on Shea.

Walks Run Over Plate.

This was no time to pitch to Shea, with Hadley next at bat, and the Browns' catcher got the fourth ball deliberately. But it developed that the move was habit-forming, for Whitehill also walked Hadley and the run walked over the plate.

The Nats never got that run back. For six innings, only Manush was able to get a base hit off Hadley. Once a double play cut him down, and again he advanced a man as far as third, but Goslin couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

Joe Cronin led off the seventh with the fourth and last hit off Hadley and he, too, perished at third when neither Schulte nor Cliff Bolton, who hit for Bluege, could lend a helping hand. It was the Nats' dying gasp.

Double Steal Fails.

The closest the Browns came to scoring again on Whitehill was in the fifth when Reynolds' single drove West to third with two out, but Joe Cronin nipped a double steal at the plate with a neat throw and delayed scoring matters until the ninth.

The carnage in the ninth was frightful. Burns began with a double off the right-field wall, Mellilo bounced a hit off Boken's glove, Levey sacrificed, and Cronin dispensed with Whitehill. McAfee came in to walk Pinch Hitter Garms intentionally and fill the bases, thereby getting at Hadley again.

But Hadley got to McAfee—with a single past Cronin that scored two runs and opened the flood gates. Then followed a single by Scharein, a triple by Reynolds and a single by Campbell and the Browns had six runs for their ninth inning efforts. Jack Russell finally halted the slaughter.

Meanwhile, and in the ninth, Hadley continued to drape the Nats with well-known horse collars.

Griffith Is Strong on Keeping Game Romantic, Says Pegler

Deplores Emphasis on Commercial Phase—But Is Due to Make a Lot of Coin This Year—Despite His Ideas, Is View.

By Westbrook Pegler.

WHAT with those fist-fights between the Nationals and the Yankees, which stimulated business early in the season, and the recent rise of his ball club to the top of the American League, Clark Griffith, the principal owner of the Washington baseball firm, is likely to make "a few shillings for himself and his stockholders this year."

Mr. Griffith must be very happy over this, for, much as he deplores emphasis on the commercial phase of the industry as harmful to the romantic illusions of the customers, he would not be a baseball magnate if he were not a very practical business man himself.

May Make Great Deal.

In this phase of his character, the only thing which would be likely to please him more than making quite a few shillings would be to make quite a few more shillings. He may even do that before the season is over, in which case his pleasure will know only the widest bounds, if any. Mr. Griffith, business man though he is, has curious ideas as to the customers' psychology.

He thinks their thoughts should never be directed to the commercial phases of the business of the contest itself, and the rivalries of the firms, or teams, as he would prefer to call them. It can not be that he regards business as something sordid, however, because if that were the case he would not be in business. He merely holds that, in the minds of the customers and of the athletes, thoughts of gate receipts, profits and pay are an ugly weed growth which are likely to choke out the colorful flowers of illusion.

Not as Employes.

He would like the Washington customers, or fans as he would prefer to call them, because there, again, the word customers imparts an unpleasant suggestion of business—he would like the Washington fans to think of the Washington ball players, not as employes, but as loyal followers of a loving leader, which would be himself. If

Experts Predict 4:07.6 Mile for Lovelock

New Record-Breaker Also Confident He Can Do Better If Pressed.

By Alan Gould.

NEW YORK, July 16 (A.P.).—Jack Lovelock, the curly-haired New Zealand youth who came half way around the world to smash the world one-mile running record to bits in the cloistered seclusion of Princeton University, left the impression today with those who were thrilled by his remarkable victory over Bill Bonthron that he can do considerably better than 4:07.6 for the classic distance, strange and almost unbelievable as it may seem.

Lovelock, 23 years old and with two years more of medical study at Oxford before him, thinks so himself.

Nats-Browns to Be Idle Today

To Resume Tomorrow, With Blaeholder and Russell Opposing.

Crowder Slightly Hurt; Campbell, a Hurler, Joins Washington.

By Frank H. Young.

THE Nationals draw a blank on the schedule today and it is just as well, for it will give them an opportunity of figuring out ways and means of finding their lost batting power, which disappeared somewhere between here and New York at the end of their last Western trip. In order that his men may confine their efforts to this figuring, Manager Joe Cronin has excused them from practice this morning.

Tomorrow the Nats and Browns will resume their series, with Jack Russell, who has not started a game since Hector was a pup, and George Blaeholder doing the hurling.

Two streaks were ended in Griffith Stadium yesterday, the Browns breaking a losing one at six in a row and Earl Whitehill seeing his string of five successive victories snapped.

"General" Al Crowder suffered a minor injury while chasing flies before yesterday's game and may not be available for a day or so. The first finger of his pitching hand collided with the ball and the nail was loosened and almost torn off.

John Millard Campbell, the pitcher recently bought from Albany, showed up yesterday. He was known as Millard, or Whitey, when he played with Alabama in 1925-29. He went from college to Birmingham and since has played with New Haven and Reading, the latter city's franchise being taken over by Albany last season.

Campbell is an inch and a half taller than 6 feet and weighs 180 pounds. His forte is his curve ball. In practice before yesterday's game he was quite effective, a tricky arm motion adding to his deceptiveness, but his fast one is not so hot.

Whitehill's left leg was given an assist in the first. West's hot grounder caromed off of it directly to First Baseman Kuhel.

Levey went back to the grass to make a hit-robbing gloved-hand grab of Schulte's liner opening the home second.

After a wild pitch had moved St. Louis runners to third and second in the second round, Whitehill, in a hole on Shea, purposely gave him a fourth ball. Then he forced in a run by accidently passing Hadley.

Melillo and Levey did some fast handling of the ball to nip Manush and Goslin in a twin murder on the latter's roller in the fourth. At that, many thought Umpire Summers was wrong in ruling the out at first.

Cronin did some fine work in nipping West at home on an attempted double steal with Reynolds in the fifth. Sewell's throw was low, but the Nat leader scooped it up and rifled the ball back to the

Red Sox Beaten by Indians in 14th, 2-1

Hudlin Grants Five Hits; Weiland Also Goes Route; Gives 12.

BOSTON, July 16 (A.P.).—Willis Hudlin turned in a masterful pitching performance today as Cleveland defeated the Red Sox, 2 to 1, in a 14-inning game.

The Indian hurler, hooked up in a mound duel with Lefty Bob Weiland, allowed the Sox only five hits, all of them singles. During the first nine innings he restricted the Boston attack to a solitary single, but was forced to carry the burden through extra innings because of an unearned run which the Red Sox scored in the second ining.

Scores on Error.

Roy Johnson walked in that frame, stole second and scored after two were out on an error by Knickerbocker. The young shortstop helped to tie the score three innings later, however, when he singled, advanced on Hudlin's bunt and Porter's infield out, and scored on Boss' double to center.

Lucas Goes 15 Innings for Victory in First and Hubbell Wins 2d.

CINCINNATI, July 16 (A.P.).—A shutout doubleheader was divided by the Reds and Giants today, Cincinnati taking the first, 1 to 0, after a 15-inning pitching duel, and New York winning the second by a similar score.

After losing seven straight games since May 15, Red Lucas made a wonderful comeback against Leroy Parmelee in the first game, going the full route and setting the visitors down in order from the tenth to the fifteenth inning when they got their final hit.

Finally Won Out.

After muffing numerous opportunities to score with the bases filled, the Reds won when Grantham singled, Moore sacrificed, Hafey was purposely passed and Hemsley singled to right, scoring Grantham.

The Giants won the second game in the fourth inning. Manager Bill Terry obtained two bases on a drive to center field which Hafey got his glove on but couldn't hold. Ott flied to Hafey, Terry advancing

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

LEST I be branded a traitor to the cause of Griffith Inc., I shall refrain this morning from viewing with alarm the sitcheeayshun of the Nats which is eloquently described in the American League's vital statistics, but I may be permitted, perhaps, to look with askance.

They've finally gone and done it. Used up their league lead completely, and now we have a fine how-dee-do with the Yankees already drawn abreast and showing no signs of terminating an eight-game winning streak. The four-and-a-half-game lead of last week is no more. Woe is me.

But lest you imply that the rats are the first to desert a sinking ship, this is no desertion despite the absence of doubt as to the direction in which the Good Ship Washington is settling. I am merely looking with askance at the sudden turn of affairs that has leveled the league lead.

Batting Falls Off.

Everything, however, has been entirely obvious. There is no deep dark secret as to how it all came about. The Yankees simply went ahead and won eight straight ball games while the Nats were losing five of their last nine, and, presto! the two clubs are in a tie.

But the sad part of it all is the way the Nats have been batting, or rather, the way they haven't been batting. Their last four games explain a lot. They have been held to three hits, to six hits, to six hits and to four hits in their last four performances. Which, with a bit of lightning calculation, reveals that they have averaged exactly 4 3-4 hits during the four-game stretch.

Maybe we expect too much. But we had a right to expect a bit more from the team that had been leading the entire league in club batting, with an average of better than .300. If this keeps up, we could discard our askance and begin to view with alarm again, which I should hate to do inasmuch as two weeks ago I was viewing conditions in the American League through pennant-tinted glasses and dragging avidly at the old success pipe.

Better Than Expected.

And now I'm reminded that Washington, after all, hasn't much to beef about. Joe Cronin has given the public a ball club that even now shares the league lead, when 99 per cent of the critics consigned them to second place, far behind the Yankees.

The Nats went out West and conquered their old road jinx, losing only three games in the hinterlands. They came back East to mop up the Yankees in a doubleheader and they came home to stretch their lead to 4½ games. A grateful public lavished their praises, met them at the station, and hailed them as

Victory in Arlington Classic Puts Inlander in Race for 3-Year-Old Crown

Race for '33 Far From Settled

Newest Candidate Adds $32,755 to Winnings in Chicago Classic.

War Glory Only Racer Among Elite to Improve Standing.

CHICAGO, July 16 (A.P.).—The three-year-old racing championship for 1933 still remains to be settled.

The newest candidate for the honor is Inlander, which started out yesterday in the $35,000 added Arlington Classic, identified as a horse paired with Okapi as the Brookmeade Stable entry, and came back as the winner of $32,755 of the purse.

Most of the other candidates were on the track or the premises, but none was able to do anything toward strengthening its claim. Mr. Khayyam, winner of the American Derby and the Wood Memorial, was scratched because of the gooey condition of the track.

Head Play Disappoints.

Head Play, victorious in the Preakness and second in the Kentucky Derby, went along and finished twelfth in a field of thirteen, beaten by 30 lengths.

The Darb, whose claim was based on a victory in the Withers, couldn't do much in the mud and finished up ahead of Head Play. The winner of the Latonia Derby, Gold Basis, wound up seventh.

War Glory, which won the Dwyer Stakes, came closer than any of them to improving his rating. After setting most of the early pace, he weakened in the heavy going, but still had enough to save third place behind the victor and Golden Way. Kerry Patch, the accomplishments of which have been meager since his victory in the Belmont Futurity last year, was fourth, with Okapi, the winner's stablemate, fifth, and Sarada, the post-time favorite, sixth.

Edelweiss, Filly, Fails.

The only filly to accept the issue, the Wheatley Stable's Edelweiss, winner of the Coaching Club Oaks, trailed Gold Basis, with Pomponius, Silent Shot, The Darb, Head Play and Red Roamer, winding up the parade.

Inlander, ridden by Bobby Jones, came from fifth place in the stretch to beat out Golden Way by a length and a half in 2:12, creditable time for the condition of the track.

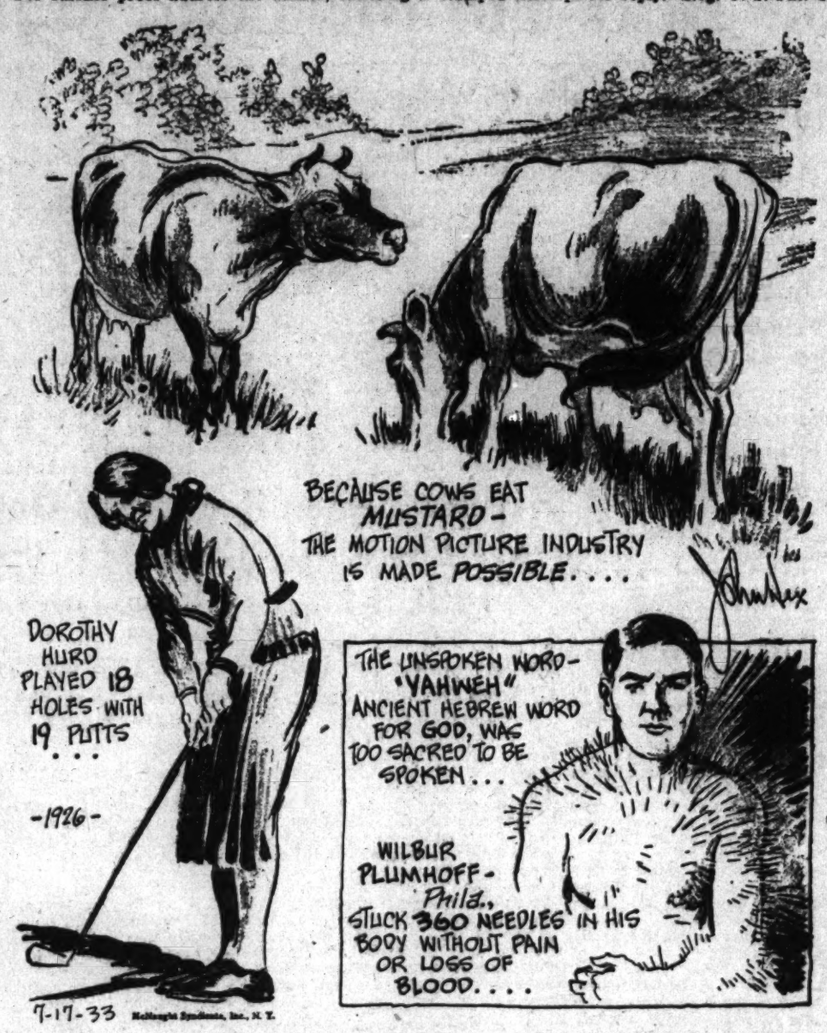
Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



THE motion picture industry depends, among other things, on the fact that wild mustard grows on the range, and that cattle there eat it. This fact was revealed by Dr. C. E. K. Mees, director of the Eastman research laboratories at Rochester, after an investigation into the chemistry of photography.

The gelatin used in the manufacture of film is made from cow's hide and, according to Dr. Mees, certain impurities are present in the gelatin because cattle eat wild mustard with their other food in the pasture. This accidental presence of sulphur-bearing impurities is necessary to the chain of chemical reactions which take place in the manufacture, exposure and development of motion picture film.

* * * *

The ancient Hebrew word for God, "Yahweh," was too sacred to be spoken publicly. Because of this, priests who copied Hebrew texts printed a substitute word beneath the word "Yahweh" so that anyone reading the Scripture could speak the substitute word instead of the sacred one. "Adonay" or "Adonai" was often used as the substitute.

When Christian translators in the Middle Ages undertook to rewrite the Bible in European languages they apparently did not understand the purpose of the double word, so they took the consonants of "Yahweh" and the vowels of "Adonay" and combined them to form a word meaning God. From this evolved our present form "Jehovah."

Colors give added realism to strange things and happenings illustrated by John Hix on a full page in The Sunday Post.

Dear Al: Arlington Park, July 16.

I almost threw a ringer Saturday. Three substitute races were tossed in when the mud came up, leaving me five chances to make good. I had Wise Daughter, Miss Tulsa, Indian Runner right on the hickey. And I'm crediting myself with a win on Okapi because Inlander, the stablemate, stepped down in the classic. In my only other try, Annimessic ran second at a good price. Getting out of the back-slapping department right now.

Mike offers The Crane, Billy Champ, Ojibway, Optical, Employment and Jamblaya for his public. BILL.

FIRST RACE—I'm going to IMACOUNT in the opener. I've been informed that this youngster works brilliantly and is ready to pop up at this asking. BUSY SPAIN has been busy and may be the second one here. Who knows? GAY MONARCH to show.

SECOND RACE—DR. KLEIN did a lot of running in that last outing and it would not surprise me if he collected a set of brackets in this. STEPPING HIGH and FAST COLORS for the other money positions.

THIRD RACE—LA SALLE may never be caught in this mile. Goes from the inside and seems to be regaining good form. OUTBOUND is the one he must beat. The third is a guess. It might be PEACE LADY.

FOURTH RACE—FLAG HORN seems well placed in this race, although he can't make mistakes and take the measure of GENE D. WISE WAYS gets the Bennings show call.

FIFTH RACE—PRINCESS CAMELIA threw me down the other day and I'm going right back for more. She will like the track and I'm taking my chances for a good price. TECHNIQUE is the chief threat. BAMBOULA for the rest.

SIXTH RACE—This is a tough race and I'm inclined to lean to LARRANAGA. This one has class written all over him and seems capable of carrying the top weight. Reported to be ready. POLYDORUS and DYAK for the other places.

SEVENTH RACE—ISLAM is at his best and this gang will know they have been in a hoss race if something else wins. COG-AIR will be ready if anything goes amiss with the top one. SANDWRACK may be the sleeper.

EIGHTH RACE—I tried to put ULTRAMARINE over the boys recently and took a sock on the jaw. However, I know this one is ready. Worth trying. DARK SEA and ANITA ORMONT for the rest. The last named could take it all.

Girl Divers Vie at Glen Echo Tonight

Marie Duval, Lois Bates, Leonora Taube Holding Hopes of District.

CLOSE competition between five star performers is expected to make the national junior outdoor diving championship for women at Glen Echo tonight an outstanding event. Three of the District's best springboard atrtists are pitted against two outstanding performers from the metropolitan area, offering a chance for comparison between the efforts of local talent and their more renowned opponents.

Madeline Karson and Margaret Abramitis, two of the best junior women divers in the country, are rated a few points ahead of the local entrants, Marie Duval, Lois Bates and Leonora Taube. However, local followers of affairs acquatic are of the opinion that any of the District's entrants are capable of extending to the utmost and perhaps winning from their out-of-town competitors.

Braves and Cubs Divide Twin Bill

Chicago Wins Second, 3-1, After Losing First, 2-1, Before 28,000 Fans.

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—The second-place Cubs and the Boston Braves divided their double-header before 28,000 fans here today, the Cubs taking the second game, 3 to 1, behind Guy Bush's pitching, after Wally Berger had won the opener for the Braves, 2 to 1, with his season's seventeenth home run.

With the exception of the fifth inning, when the Braves bunched three of their seven hits for their lone tally, Bush encountered little difficulty in the second game to turn in his fifth consecutive victory and his eleventh of the season.

Riggs Stephenson drove in the Cubs' two winning runs in the sixth inning after Tom Zachary had had shut them out until then.

THE list of contenders for the first half honors in the unlimited division of the Capital City League shrank to two yesterday, Miller Furniture Co. and Stanton Cleaners. The Millers remained in the fight by eliminating Dor-A through the medium of an 8-to-5 victory. The only other team with a chance to win, Certified Barbers, was thrown for a 10-to-7 loss by St. Joseph's. All other teams were idle.

Dor-A's loss was its second in a row. Only a week ago the Stantons ended its five-game winning streak. The Millers hopped aboard the offerings of Bob Ruble for five in the third inning and three more in the seventh.

Barbers' Rally Short.

"Grassy" Grazzini was almost blasted from the mound by the Barbers in the ninth inning, but managed to settle down after three runs had crossed the plate to save the day for the "Saints." It was an eighth-inning uprising that put the eventual winners out in front.

Lovelock Capable Of 4.6 Mile, Belief

A comparatively "slow" third quarter yesterday in 65.1 seconds compelled Lovelock to turn on a full blast of foot racing power and speed the final 440 yards in 58.9 seconds to erase the former world mark of 4:09.2, held by Jules Ladoumegue, of France, and beat the great Bonthron by 7 yards in a race that left 5,000 spectators gasping. None who saw Bonthron's fighting finish fail to match his rival's doubted Lovelock's capacity to do the distance in 4:06 or better. All he needs, as he remarked himself, is to be paced to the three-quarter mark in around 3:06, for he has the sprinting ability any time he is in condition to do the last 440 yards of a mile in 60 seconds or faster.

And right now, six other clubs in the league would willingly exchange places with the Nats. They proved their mettle once, and the averages say the power is still there. In the best phraseology of Mr. Griffith, all together, folks, let's have a little confidence. Povich was only kidding.

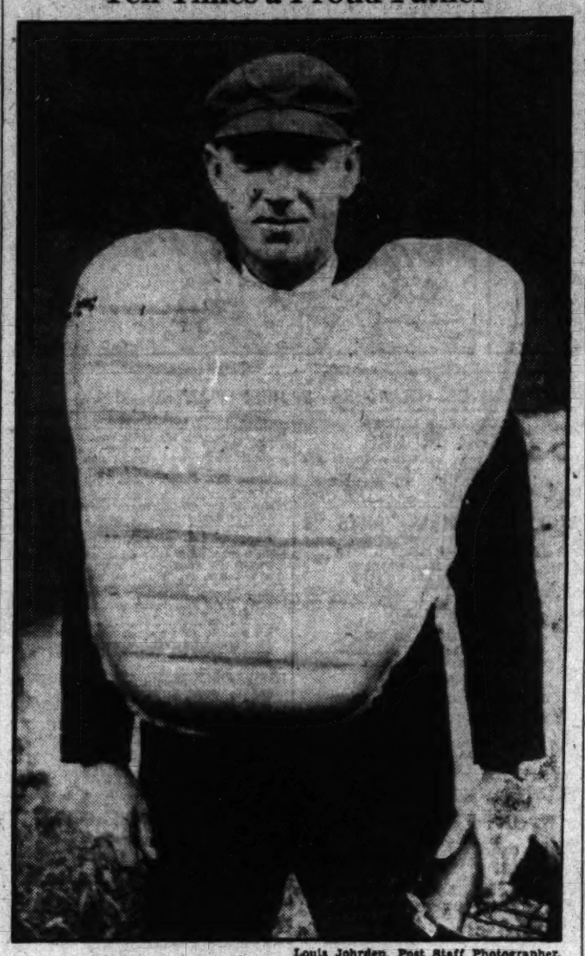
Ten Times a Proud Father



Louis Johrden, Post Staff Photographer.

Robert Emmett (Red) Ormsby, veteran American League umpire, announces the birth of his tenth child. He is pictured at Griffith Stadium yesterday, before officiating in the Washington-St. Louis game.

Large Family of Wounded World War Hero Lives Near Chicago.

THAT strange glow emanating from near third base at Griffith Stadium yesterday was radiated from the face of Umpire Robert Emmett (Red) Ormsby, who was calling 'em at that point. Mr. Ormsby has every reason to assume a beatific expression. He has just become the proud father of a 10 2-3 pounds baby daughter, born Friday.

Even prior to Friday, Umpire and Mrs. Ormsby had quite a collection of bouncing boys and girls, the newest being their tenth. The others are, in chronological order: Dorothea, age 1; Robert, 2; Edward, 3; Dolores, 5; Byron, 6; Emmett, 7; Helen, 8; Rosemary, 9, and Rita, 10.

Mrs. Ormsby hasn't yet quite decided what the new baby will be christened, but is known to be inclined toward the cognomen Nancy. Umpire Ormsby admits that, while his decisions are supreme on the field, they don't cut much ice when it comes to naming little Ormsbys. So the matter rests entirely in the hands of the missus.

Before the war, Ormsby played on the Marine baseball team at Quantico. He served through most of the heavy hostilities with the Second Division, being incapacitated for active service by gas and wounds. A short time afterward he returned to his first love as an arbiter and has been an umpire ever since.

Mrs. Ormsby and all the children are doing nicely at the Ormsby home in Evergreen Park, near Chicago.

Crew Resumes Tests Today For Races

Potomac Club Oarsmen Undismayed as Shell Is Destroyed.

UNDISMAYED by the disastrous and dramatic termination of their workout in Washington channel yesterday afternoon when their shell overturned, members of the Potomac Boat Club crew will resume training for the approaching Southern Rowing Association regatta today.

The Potomac oarsmen are held in high esteem by rival clubs and virtually had been installed as favorites to win the eight-oar shell race next Saturday. Clarence Hecox, coach of the crew, said the loss of the shell would not only handicap the team in its training, but also impair seriously its chances in the regatta.

The shell was the lightest and fastest owned by the club. Other boats are available, but the one being used was the fastest of the lot.

List of Entries.

Entries have been received from the following clubs: Virginia Boat Club, Richmond; Arundel Boat Club, Baltimore; New York A. C.; Penn A. C., Philadelphia; Vesper Boat Club, Philadelphia; University Barge Club, Philadelphia, and the local Potomac Boat Club.

This, the first rowing regatta staged on the Potomac since 1923, promises to exceed in color and action any ever before held in this vicinity. The majority of teams entered are composed of former college men and veteran oarsmen.

Fourteen events are scheduled. The first will be at 2 o'clock. All races will be rowed over a 1-mile course in the Washington channel.

Richmond Golfers Down Nee and Pitt

Howell and Cruickshank Win, 5 and 1; None of Four in Best Form.

Richmond, Va., July 16.—Maurice Nee and Harry Pitt, Washington golf stars, lost an exhibition match, 3 and 1, at the Country Club of Virginia here today to Billy Howell and Bobby Cruickshank.

No one of the foursome was on his game. Howell's 73, one over, was the best medal. Pitt picked up on five holes and was two over on those he played. Nee was 38, two over, going out, after having lost a stroke to par on each of the first three holes. Cruickshank had an approximate 75.

Irving Burns leaped a mile high to snare Whitehill's liner with his gloved hand in the native sixth.

Hadley did not issue a pass until the sixth when he walked Myer, making him only the third Nat to have seen base-life at this stage of the proceedings.

With Myer on third and Manush on first in the sixth, Goslin drove a bounder right through Hadley's legs. It looked like a sure hit, but Levey hustled over almost behind second to gather in the ball and touch second for a force-play.

Capital Boy, 2, Is Drowned in Private Pool

Child Discovers Body Floating in Water at Wayside, Md.

Two-year-old Edward Leitch, jr., of 1340 Fairmont street, northwest, was drowned yesterday in the shallow end of a private swimming pool adjoining the summer home of his grandfather, at Wayside, Charles County, Md.

The body was discovered by another child who cried out that there was a baby doll floating in the pool. The boy's grandfather, A. T. Bovello, removed the body from the water and took it to Waldorf where a call was put in for the District Fire Rescue Squad.

The parents of the child had been swimming in the deep end of the pool and were just leaving the water when the tragedy was discovered. The child's father, Edward Leitch, who is employed by Bovello in a plumbing business, attempted to give the boy first aid.

Members of the Rescue Squad worked for more than an hour to revive the boy. Dr. George O. Monroe issued a certificate of accidental drowning. The body was taken to the District Morgue.

Silver Spring Library Acts to Assist Teachers

Preparation of folders containing pictures and reading matter for use in classrooms by teachers is to be undertaken by the advisory board of the Silver Spring Public Library Association. The folders will take the place of those formerly provided by the Washington Public Library which has discontinued the service.

Old magazines, especially scientific publications, are needed in the work and Mrs. Lloyd Beers, whose telephone number is Silver Spring 429, is in charge of this work. The library also needs pictures for the walls, either as a loan or as a gift.

E. F. Hill Returns From Kiwanis Trip

Capital Governor Attended Meeting on Brink of Grand Canyon.

Sun-tinted and refreshed by 6,500 miles of new scenes, Edwin F. Hill, governor of the Capital District Kiwanis International, arrived back in town last night after the Pacific Coast convention of the United States and Canada Kiwanis clubs.

Mr. Hill left June 19 for the convention and augmented the trip with considerable side travel, including a visit to the Grand Canyon, where the first meeting of a Kiwanis club was held on the brink of the great gulch.

Irving Diener, president of the Alexandria (Va.) Kiwanis Club, made the principal speech of the Grand Canyon meeting. En route back to Washington, Mr. Hill visited Denver, motored through several of the Rockies and took in the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago.

Horseshoe Tosser Slain In Dispute Over Game

A backyard horseshoe-tossing game near Laytonsville, Md., ended yesterday with one man dead and another under arrest by county police at Rockville.

George Webster, colored, of Laytonville, was shot and killed following an argument during the game. The shooting occurred only after he and Grafton Nelson, both armed, stood a few paces apart to "fight it out."

Nelson, also colored, was later arrested and held for investigation at the county jail in Rockville.

Raid Erroneously Reported.

The arrest of Charles H. Meyers in an alleged liquor raid Saturday night was reported in The Post yesterday to have been made at 2124 I street northwest. There was no raid at the I street address. The Post regrets the error.

Oarsmen Thrown in River as Racing Shell Overturns

Members of the Potomac Boat Club racing crew and their battered shell, wrecked by swells of a passing yacht. The men were rescued by Harbor Police. Nine Injured, 3 in Family, by Auto Crashes

Sideswiped Car Plunges Over Embankment Near Chesapeake Beach.

Nine persons were known to have been injured in three automobile accidents on highways within a few miles distance of Washington last night. Several others, believed to have been hurt, failed to arrive at any local hospital.

Three members of a family were among the most seriously injured when the car of Louis Blonberg, of 1146 Morris street northeast, plunged over a 5-foot embankment near Chesapeake Beach. Blonberg's car was sideswiped by another car. State police were unable to learn the identity of occupants in the other car.

Mrs. Goldie Blonberg, 44, wife of the driver, suffered a possible fracture of the skull, concussion of the brain and severe lacerations. Her condition is critical. Blonberg escaped with minor injuries. His daughter, Ethel Blonberg, 19, received severe back injuries. A passenger in the car, Miss Sarah Mann, 55, of 337 Thirteenth street southeast, suffered lacerations to her face and body. All were treated at Casualty Hospital.

Three Cars in Crash.

A three-way collision within a mile of the Blonberg accident brought injuries to at least three persons. Miss Ethel M. A. Fowler, of 336 Massachusetts avenue northeast, driver of one of the cars, suffered a fractured left leg and bruises.

Mrs. Nellie Fowler, a passenger, of Capitol Heights, Md., received a fractured right arm and lacerations. They were taken to Providence Hospital. William E. Lusky, 30, of 1125 Seventh street northeast, riding in one of the other cars, was treated at Casualty Hospital for severe lacerations to his face and body.

Maryland State police at Waldorf, Md., reported that a man giving his name as William G. Heflin, was driver of the car in which Lusky was riding. Neither he nor occupants of the third car could be located in hospitals. Police said they were all taken to Washington.

The accident occurred, police said, when one of the cars attempted to pass another in heavy traffic.

Thrown From Motorcycle.

Two youths were seriously injured when thrown from a motorcycle on the Mount Vernon boulevard, near Capital Overlook. Their cycle struck the car of E. Barnard, of Lochmont, N. Y., police said.

The injured are Julius Urciolo, 20, of 1100 Quincy street northwest, and Hubert Council, 18, of 1327 Tenth street northwest. Urciolo suffered a fractured right ankle and lacerations to his face and body. Council received hurts to his back and severe bruises and cuts. Both youths were thrown to the roadway.

The young men were found lying along the highway by Policeman P. T. Fogerty, of the Park Police. He was off duty and probably saved the life of Urciolo by stopping the flow of blood. Barnard said he did not know the motorcycle struck his car. He was not held.

Swell From Passing Yacht Crushes Fragile Craft Off Hains Point.

Hope of Victory in Regatta Saturday Dimmed by Loss of Vessel.

Overturned by the sudden swell of a passing yacht, the racing shell of the Potomac Boat Club was smashed to bits and the crew of eight husky oarsmen and their coxswain catapulted into the water off Hains Point yesterday afternoon.

Pulling the mile course in a speed test in preparation for the Southern Rowing Association regetta next Saturday, the men did not see the approaching yacht in time to broadside their craft to the waves, and with a ripping crash the fragile shell plunged her bow into an oncoming swell and buckled.

Members of the crew clung to the shattered craft until a harbor police boat picked them up.

Joseph Feigley, coxswain, said he frantically signaled the yacht to give a wider berth, but the pilot continued on his course, passing a short distance from the light racing craft. His identity is unknown.

Hope for a victory in the regatta next Saturday is considerably lessened by the accident, George Hernan, vice president of the club, disclosed. It will be impossible for the club to acquire a new shell before the race, and the old one, which they will have to use, is said to be much slower than the craft wrecked.

Rover Speeds All Criminal Court Cases

Few Remained Unfinished at Court Recess, Report Reveals.

The criminal docket of the District Supreme Court was almost clear of cases when the courts recessed for the summer July 1 it was shown in a tabulation of the fiscal year's "grist," which yesterday was submitted to United States Attorney Leo A. Rover by John J. Conliff, jr., chief clerk of the office.

While there were 41 cases pending, only 30 were actually triable, the remaining 11 having been indicted by the grand jury just prior to the adjournment. In the year ended June 30, 1932, there were 210 cases pending.

During the last fiscal year 1,489 criminal prosecutions were terminated, and of that number 1,124 were convicted. In addition, 913 pleas of guilty were entered, and 88 acquittals were recorded.

Only one second degree murder case and a single manslaughter charge remained among the more serious offenses.

The number of jury trials reached 299, and 270 cases were dropped through "nolle prosses."

The docket was in such a condition that persons indicted one week could, if they chose, be tried within that same week. Mr. Rover has aimed at clearing up a docket that, when he took office, was so congested it required several months to reach trial.

New Hope Seen For 'John Doe,' Amnesia Victim

Man Reacts to Hearing W. M. Schafer's Name, One Found in Cleveland.

New hope welled in the breast of John Doe yesterday with the knowledge that steps are being renewed with increased vigor to establish his identity. As he roamed the grounds of the home for aged at Blue Plains, Cleveland, Ohio, authorities were goaded to new activity by the amnesia victim's recent disclosures.

The latest and most significant development in the strange case is his marked reaction on hearing the name W. M. Schafer. This name was one of 20 with the initials W. M. S. taken from a Cleveland telephone directory and pronounced to him by Edward B. Haskell, superintendent of the District infirmary.

The Post immediately communicated with W. M. Schafer, after John Doe stammered nervously he thinks it is the name of a friend or relative but not his own.

A laundrymark with the initials W. M. S. is in John Doe's shirt. Since April 9, when he walked confusedly into police headquarters and said he was "lost, hungry and tired," he has clung to the belief he is a Clevelander.

The white-haired derelict has said he was a salesman for a banking equipment company and usually carried large sums on his trips from Cleveland into the East and South. When found he had neither baggage nor money. He was clean shaven and neatly groomed and bore no marks.

Veterans Guests On Potomac Trip

Patients from Mount Alto, Walter Reed and Naval Hospitals were guests on the General Rucker on a trip down the Potomac River last night under the auspices of a committee headed by Mrs. Laura V. Dann, welfare worker among the veterans of the city.

The boat left the War College Wharf with the holiday makers at 6 p. m., returning later at night. Mrs. Dann was assisted by Miss Lillian Dann, Miss Agnes Brophy, Miss Mamie V. Glascock, Slyde B. Stovall and Mrs. Mabel Shackelford.

The entertainment was furnished by a section of the Marine Band and a group of Phil Hayden entertainers.

Identified

Skeleton of D. C. Woman's Brother Found Near Colorado River.

A skeleton found on the sandy slopes of the Colorado River was identified last night as that of Peter O. Weise, 70-year-old gold prospector, brother of Mrs. Luman A. Ferris, 1338 Fairmont street northwest.

Authorities believe Weise was slain for gold he may have had or that he had wandered off his trail and died of exhaustion. His body was found on the California side of the river, about 10 miles above Laguna Dam.

He had made a several months' visit to the Capital about two years ago. Then he set off on his prospecting trip. He had spent 20 years in searching for gold in Alaska. He lived in San Diego, Calif.

Three Women Escape Death From Poison

Fast Hospital Treatment Saves D. C. Pair Who Took Tablets.

While two women, victims of poison, were saved from probable death by speedy hospital treatment yesterday, a third was reported out of danger in Georgetown Hospital after swallowing a purported poison tablet Saturday night.

A quantity of poison, allegedly swallowed following a quarrel at her home yesterday, sent Miss Patricia McCarthy, 23, of 1410 Chapin street northwest, to Emergency Hospital in a serious condition. She was discovered unconscious in a first-floor room of her home by Joseph Gurby, of 1811 Wyoming avenue northwest. Gurby, a family friend, summoned medical aid.

Mrs. Grace Schwab, 32, of 428 H street northwest, is also in Emergency Hospital, suffering, police said, from a quantity of poison potion. She was found by Joseph Cunningham, a roomer at her home, who took her to the hospital. Friends indicated Mrs. Schwab had recently been despondent over ill health.

Physicians at Georgetown Hospital last night reported that Mrs. Ruby Havner, 32, of Rosslyn, Va., who told police she swallowed a poison tablet at her home late Saturday, was "doing nicely." She will be able to leave the hospital within a few days, it was declared.

Mother, Deprived of Food So Baby Can Eat, in Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kincaid in Georgetown University Hospital, where she is under treatment for near-starvation. Inset: The couple's son, Billy, against whose hunger they have fought.

Parents Use Last Money to Supply Son Milk; They Go Unfed.

A little mound of empty milk bottles last night gleamed dully under a Post photographer's flashlight—mute figures in the two months' battle of a jobless butcher to shield his wife and baby from the horrors of starvation.

Emaciated and ill, the mother lies in a ward at Georgetown University Hospital. She weakened in the battle against hunger yesterday and a friendly welfare worker, learning of the pair's plight, sent her to the institution.

At her side sat the man, bewildered. They clasped hands as they related the pathetic story about themselves, spawned by this thing we call the depression.

Over at the home of the welfare worker, Mrs. Ada Minnix, 122 Third street southeast, the baby boy gurgled in sleepy happiness. His infant mind hadn't penetrated the thing that had been happening so close to him. His blue eyes had been unable to comprehend.

Couldn't Find Job.

Billy is the baby boy's name. He's eleven months old. His mother and father, Beulah and J. C. Kinkaid, came here two months ago from Harrisonburg, Va. Almost penniless, Kinkaid thought that surely he'd find a butcher shop in this big town that would have a job for him.

The trio brought their home along with them. It is a low wooden room, built on the body of a light motor truck. Arriving, they obtained permission to park on the side lawn at the home of Ed Thompson, near Rosslyn, Va.

Daily, Kinkaid tramped into town. Some days he walked 20 miles, looking for work. But he couldn't find it. And daily their small store of money dwindled.

Thompson, whose family numbers eleven, was unaware of the dire straits of the pair. They were proud. The only inkling Thompson had was one day when they asked him for a "loaf of bread." This he gave, but did not suspect the real story.

But the little mound of bottles grew. Billy had to have his milk, though mother and father went hungry.

Weakens Under Strain.

Last week Mrs. Kincaid, wasting away under the strain, became ill. Kincaid heard of Mrs. Minnix through her work with the Fourth Police Precinct's activities for the hungry and helpless.

He informed Mrs. Minnix of his troubles. She took the thin blue-eyed mother to Gallinger Municipal Hospital. There they said most of her trouble was malnutrition. She was discharged after a couple of days and with a donation from Mrs. Minnix, the pair again took up their fight.

But Saturday night Mrs. Kincaid became ill again. Through the night she moaned. Yesterday morning Kincaid called Mrs. Minnix. Quickly she obtained the help of a friend who owns a private ambulance and took her to the hospital.

Home Owners' Loan Quarters To Open Soon

Jones, District Manager, Is Besieged for Jobs as Well as Aid.

Pursued by hundreds of District home owners, mortgage holders and job hunters, Charles A. Jones, local manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, slipped out of the city Saturday afternoon for an undesignated Chesapeake Bay resort.

Prior to departing Mr. Jones said he didn't expect "to know anything" until next Wednesday, and chose to remain a nonentity until that time.

The corporation board is expected to set up the machinery for the local manager by next Wednesday, decide where his office is to be and what the personnel is to consist of.

Tentative plans call for a staff of 30 or 40. This staff will consist of appraisers, attorneys and clerks. Prospective job hunters are understood to be just as eager to clamor at Mr. Jones' door as distressed home owners and mortgage holders.

The attorneys and appraisers will pass upon the applications for loans before they are submitted to the corporation for final action. Only those home owners who are in need of emergency relief will be considered.

Loans will be made in the form the mortgage holders in these cases of bonds, plus a small amount of cash. They will amount to as much as 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property, but in no case will they exceed $14,000.

Evangelist Flays Devil Before 8,000

Emulating the performance of the St. Louis Browns a few hours earlier, Elder Lightfoot Michaux shut out the devil at Griffith Stadium last night with 8,000 in the stands. A mixed choir of 155 voices, seated to form a huge cross in the center of the diamond, assisted Elder Michaux at his weekly Sunday night services.

"Which is the Right Church?" was the evangelist's subject.

"God's church is the right church," he declared, "and no sinners are allowed."

Hymns, a prayer, a psalm reading, spirituals and an intricate exhibition by the choir were offered before the sermon. Led by Elder Michaux, the white-robed singers arose by groups to display the letters WJSV in order, formed by red caps revealed as they doffed their white hoods.

World-Famous Geologists Will Convene Here

Sessions to Be Held at U. S. Chamber of Commerce Starting Saturday.

Washington will become the forum for the world's leading geological minds next Saturday, when more than 400 geologists from 25 foreign countries and the United States convene here.

The Capital will be host to the International Geological Congress for the first time in 42 years. For a week internationally known scientists will hold daily sessions in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Waldemar Mindgren, professor of economic geology at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will serve as chairman of the congress until permanent officers are elected. W. C. Mendenhall, director of the Geological Survey, Interior Department, as general secretary of the congress, has taken an active part in preparation for the meeting.

Acting as Assistants.

Assisting him have been Dr. Edward B. Mathews, of Johns Hopkins University, Maryland State geologist, acting as treasurer, and H. G. Ferguson and Marcus I. Goldman, of the Geological Survey, associate secretaries.

President Roosevelt and the former President Hoover have been chosen as honorary presidents of the congress.

Among the geological problems to be considered following an opening general meeting Saturday morning will be methods of indicating geological time, map building, and geography-forming processes in arid regions.

To give delegates from foreign countries an opportunity to study at first hand geological formations in this country, a series of excursions to various parts of the United States will be made. Excursions by motor into Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia have been arranged.

Will See Buildings.

Plans also are being made to conduct parties of delegates through the scientific institutions of Washington.

Headquarters for the congress will be the Shoreham, where more than 100 delegates already have made reservations and where a program of evening entertainments is to be given. The Geological Society of Washington is arranging a reception to be held Saturday night.

A police emergency car, its siren screeching, overturned yesterday afternoon, after colliding with another car at Eighth and Q streets northwest. Private J. F. McWhirt, of the Second Precinct, driver of the car, was taken to Emergency Hospital with serious injuries.

The police car was en route to Eighth and T streets northwest, where trouble had been reported. Witnesses said its siren could be heard for several blocks. At the Q street intersection the car of William Williams, colored, 45, of 1202 Q street northwest, crossed the speeding emergency car's path.
